CORONER INVESTIGATES CANADIAN EXPLOSION

Many of Coal Workers' Bodies Taken From the Mines Were Crushed Beyond Identification.

Dawson, N. M., February 9.—While Dawson waits and watches in repressive silence, bowed down with grief at the disaster which fell upon it yesterday, rescue crews and volunteer workers continued tonight to comb the labyrinth of dark passages in Dawson Mine No. 1 for the dead and the living.

When the shifts of rescue workers were changed tonight, 32 bodies had been removed from the subterranean tomb in which they had been struck down yesterday afternoon. Some where in the dark depths of the many passageways not yet cleared are 88 men.

Dawson was not abandoned hope that they will be brought forth alive. Justice of the Peace T. L. Kinney late today impounded a coroner's jury which has begun the work of identifying the bodies of the dead and preparations for burial of the dead tomorrow are being made.

Cause Unknown.
The cause of the explosion still remained unexplained.

From the condition of four bodies taken from a point near the center of the mine late today indications are that the explosion centered near the heart of the workings. The four bodies were dreadfully burned, almost beyond recognition. Other bodies taken out of the mine earlier today did not show such burns. Officials are inclined to the belief that the four were caught by the full force of the detonation.

Rescue workers and repairing crews, penetrating slowly into the main entry, declare the openings into the cross-cuts have been crumbled by the blast, making it necessary to rebuild such portions of the tunnels and cross-cuts before proceeding further.

Only a handful of spectators remained about the mine tonight. Among them were wives, sisters and sweethearts of the toilers whose fate is still unknown.

Thus far, only seven families have been left fatherless by the explosion. Three-fourths of the identified dead were unmarried. Eight of the identified were American citizens.

CANADIAN DEATH TOLL 25.

Cumberland, B. C., February 9.—The death toll as a result of an explosion of fire damp last night in mine No. 4 of the Canadian Colliers (Dunsmuir), Ltd., while the night shift of 300 was at work, was placed tonight at 25. Steps toward an investigation of the cause of the disaster were begun tonight.

Thirty-one bodies had been removed from the wrecked mine, which is two miles from here, and four men, believed to be dead, remained to be accounted for. Six men, badly injured, hovered between life and death in the hospital here.

A coroner's jury was impaneled and William Sloan, British Columbia minister of mines, announced from Victoria that he had ordered an exhaustive investigation. George Wilkinson, former chief inspector of mines, already on the ground, was instructed to proceed at once with an inquiry.

The disaster was one of the worst in the history of Vancouver Island, which includes an explosion in the same mine last August that cost 13 lives.

Fourteen of the dead were white men, and twenty-one are Chinese.

New Bill Provides Sweeping Changes In Immigration Law

Washington, February 9.—Sweeping changes in the immigration law were provided for in a bill reported today by the house immigration committee.

Immigration from all countries would be restricted to 2 per cent of their nationals resident in the United States under the census of 1890, and exclude Japanese with the exception of certain students and scientists, as well as for other persons not eligible for citizenship.

ARMY MONEY BILL PASSES WITHOUT SHOALS BUDGET

Senator Norris Withdraws Nitrate Amendment in Face of Henry Ford's Offer.

ADMITS OPPONENTS WERE TOO STRONG

Heflin Attacks Proposal of Norris and Urges Immediate Action on the Ford Bid.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Washington, February 9.—The last regular appropriation bill of the present session of congress, the war department budget aggregating $340,523,000, was passed today by the senate and sent to conference.

Declaring there was no hope of obtaining the necessary votes so long as "adherents of the Ford proposal" opposed him, Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, withdrew his amendment to the bill appropriating $2,000,000 for completion of nitrate plant No. 1 at Muscle Shoals, Ala.

Senator Heflin, democrat, Alabama, also attacked the Norris amendment.

"It does seem a little out of place for the government to appropriate this $2,000,000 while the Ford offer is pending," he said. "It might all be wasted."

He also urged immediate action on the Ford offer.

Urges Progress.

Improvement of plant No. 1, Mr. Norris said, would supply Mr. Ford or any other lessee or purchaser of the properties with adequate machinery to carry on experiments looking to discovery of new processes. Such a laboratory would be necessary, he insisted, if the cost of fertilizer was to be reduced.

While adoption of his amendment "might mean a modification of the Ford offer as it now stands," Mr. Norris continued, supporters of the Detroit manufacturer should support the appropriation if they expect the country to have any faith in the sincerity of purpose behind the offer.

"I do not guarantee that use of the remodeled plant will result in discoveries which will reduce the cost of nitrates," the Nebraska senator said. "We are traveling in this matter on a path leading into an unexplored wilderness. But I contend every effort should be made to make progress along that path."

Personally, the speaker declared, he would prefer to have private capital conduct the experiments except for the certainty that any material results would be at once patented and thus withheld from the public or given at increased cost because of royalties.

PEANUT GROWERS FORM ASSOCIATION

Thousand Georgia Representatives Hear Address by Aaron Sapiro on Cooperative Marketing.

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMAN.
Constitution Staff Correspondent.
Albany, Ga., February 9.—(Special.)—At a meeting of fully 1,000 farmers and agriculturally interested business men and women from all sections of Georgia held here today, the Georgia Peanut Growers' Co-operative Marketing association was created with Colonel R. E. L. Spence, chairman, and James W. Morton, president of the farm federation bureau, and James H. Mills, president of the Georgia Farmers' union, vice chairmen.

These temporary officials were charged with the legal formation of such an organization, the signing up of the peanut growers of the state, and the erection of the machinery necessary for putting the organization into active control of standardizing, packing, branding and marketing the Georgia peanut as an essential product and one of immense financial possibilities to the state.

Get-Together Assembly.
The meeting today was a general get-together assembly of practical and progressive producers in the interest of adopting general co-operative marketing systems in all farm products, the organization of the state peanut growers being one of the features.

The meeting was arranged by the state bureau of markets, and it was continued on page 4, column 4.

CHALLENGES SOLONS TO EVADE ISSUE

Senator Jones Calls Up
Measure With Ultimum of "Pass It or Reject It."

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Washington, February 9.—The administration shipping bill, which was laid before the senate today by Chairman Jones, of the commerce committee, with the assertion that it would be held before that body until a vote was taken.

After the senate had passed the army appropriation bill, the last of the big supply measures, Senator Jones took the floor and declared, "We are now ready to proceed with the shipping bill and we will pass it or not as the majority of the senate shall determine."

It is understood Senator Jones' action has the approval of President Harding although it means sidetracking the British debt funding proposal.

Chairman Jones declared there were more important bills that should be passed but declared there was ample time for consideration of all of them. He then began discussion of the merits of the bill.

Heated Discussion.

Sensor Jones' address, which was the most impassioned of any of those he has made as leader of the senate forces favoring the bill, led to heated discussion during which Senators Hitchcock of Nebraska and Fletcher of Florida, democrats, conceded that they preferred a continuation of government ownership of the merchant marine to prevent ownership under subsidy payments.

Sensor Hitchcock declared enactment of the pending bill would in his opinion mean "practically the throwing away of this war-built merchant marine."

He argued that government ownership would be instrumental in keeping ocean freight rates down and this, he said, Senator Jones to say that he was glad one of the democratic opponents of this bill had come out and stated his preference for government ownership as against the bill before the senate.

Several minutes later the commerce committee chairman drew from Senator Fletcher, who as ranking democratic member of the commerce committee has been conducting the democratic fight against the bill, that he favored "government ownership, supplemented by private operation."

Blames Action in Past.
Senator Pomeroy, of Ohio, said he wanted to be exempted from any classification which put him as a democrat in the group favoring government ownership as a solution for the merchant marine problem. He argued and Senator Jones agreed that if the plans embodied in the merchant mar-

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Washington, February 9.—Secretary Hughes declared in a letter today to Chairman Lodge in the senate foreign relations committee that written statements and documents he had recently submitted to the committee constituted all the information the state department possessed and which was compatible with the public interest to divulge on the reparations question and therefore any "oral explanation" before the committee by the secretary would be unnecessary.

The appearance of Mr. Hughes before the committee had been requested by Senator Robinson, democrat, Arkansas, in connection with the latter's resolution for the appointment of official American representatives with the reparations commission. Mr. Hughes' letter was interpreted as a virtual refusal to appear before the committee on this subject, although he indicated he might if an additional request on some specified question should be forthcoming.

Makes Letters Public.
Secretary Hughes tonight made public correspondence with Senator Lodge and with Senator Robinson.

In answer to Senator Lodge's letter of February 6, in which he transmitted without comment the request of Senator Robinson, Secretary Hughes said:

"As the letter has been transmitted for my consideration, I may say that no 'oral explanations' are needed, either to make clear or to supplement, and none could be made which could modify the direct and adequate state-

RUHR MERCHANTS REFUSE TO DEAL WITH INVADERS

Close Shops and Hotels in Dusseldorf as Protest to Occupation by French.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Dusseldorf, February 9.—Recklinghausen, where the French on Thursday put down a demonstration of protest against the deportation of the chief of police, continued today a center of agitation. Shopkeepers and hotels and restaurants closed at 2 p. m. and announced that they would not reopen until Saturday evening as an additional protest against the action of the French.

The committee of defense in the Ruhr is distributing funds to idle workers. The money has been subscribed in various parts of Germany or advanced by the German government.

Virtually no coal is being brought out of the mines. No untoward incidents were reported today. Both sides of the controversy seem to be pursuing a policy of watchful waiting.

Coal Movements Slow.

The French occupational authorities are devoting much of their time and energy to efforts to organize shipments of coal by rail and river from the Ruhr area to France. They are making slow progress, however, the shipments averaging under five thousand tons of coal and coke daily.

Seven hundred car loads of coal and coke have been concentrated in the Sedan railroad yards near Duisburg.

From this point three trains are leaving daily for LaCapelle, where the coke is diverted to Belgium and the coke is diverted to France. From three to six barges, each containing 1,000 tons, are leaving Ruhrort daily.

Food Situation Worse.

The food situation is growing worse, despite the reports of Dr. Luther, the German food administrator, that there are flour and cereals enough to last until March 15. The Germans are preparing a schedule of restrictions which are to be enforced beginning Monday. These will include a prohibition against the serving of eggs for breakfast, and meat will be permitted at only one meal each day.

The railroad strike is still completely effective throughout the entire French zone, but the locks on the Rhine canal have been repaired and navigation reopened.

Acts of sabotage continue. Six telephone lines were cut today in the vicinity of Dusseldorf and seventeen in the region of Ratingen, where the director of telephones was arrested and expelled.

LONDON DENIES ANY AGREEMENT WITH MOSLEMS

Ignorant of Reported
"Status Quo" Agreement at Smyrna Pending
Diplomatic Negotiations

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
London, February 9.—An agreement under which the status quo would be maintained pending diplomatic negotiations has been reached between the Turkish authorities in Smyrna and the allied naval commanders, says an Exchange Telegraph dispatch by way of Constantinople.

There is no confirmation here of such an agreement. A dispatch to The Times from Constantinople makes no mention of it, while a Reuters message from Constantinople asserts that the situation is unchanged and that the Turkish commander at Smyrna still awaits instructions from Ankara, where it is expected the extremists apparently are gaining the upper hand and pressing for strong measures against the allies.

A later dispatch received by The Exchange Telegraph from Constantinople asserts the Kemalists report they had a long interview with the French commissioner regarding Smyrna. This dispatch adds that the Ankara government insists that the allied warships shall leave Smyrna and that it disclaims all responsibility for disobedience of the order for them to depart.

DECLARE SITUATION STILL IS UNCHANGED.

Constantinople, February 9.—(By The Associated Press.)—So far as is known here the Ankara government has not replied to the allied protest concerning the Turkish decree for the departure of allied warships from Smyrna harbor.

The situation at Smyrna has not changed. Several foreign warships remain in the harbor while a few British vessels are outside. Signals of the mail ship Pierre Lotz for a pilot today were unanswered; she continued her voyage without entering the harbor here.

There have been rumors of the sinking of one or more merchantmen by mines, but these are without confirmation although the foreign commissions are in constant wireless touch with Smyrna.

It is announced that Mustapha Kemal Pasha will go to Ismid, there to meet Ismet Pasha, returning from the Lausanne conference, and accompany him to Ankara.

Atlanta Lauded By Noted Visitor At Realty Dinner

It Greatest "200,000 City"
He Has Ever Seen.

"Atlanta is the greatest 'two hun-and I wonder if you people here realize the magnificent opportunities that are offered you?"

The speaker was Dr. J. G. Clutterbuck, nationally known psychologist, of Cleveland, Ohio, who made the principal address last night at the annual banquet of the Atlanta real estate board, held in the Druid Hills Golf club.

"This is my first visit to the south," he said, "but I want to tell you really men that since mixing with your people and seeing for myself the wonderful spirit of enterprise that is manifest here at every turn, I am deeply impressed with the magnificent possibilities of this city, and I predict great things for Atlanta."

Given an Ovation.

Dr. Clutterbuck was given an ovation by the more than 200 real estate men who had gathered at the club to celebrate the annual meeting of the body. The speaker came to Atlanta for the purpose of surveying conditions and delivering addresses here before the L. W. Rogers Realty com-

House Passes Debt Funding Agreement By Large Majority

House Action Was on Amendment to Existing
Funding Statute—Vote
291 to 44.

NO EFFORT FOR BONUS RIDER TO MEASURE

Debt Agreement Will Be Taken Up by Senate
Finance Committee Immediately.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.
Washington, February 9.—Approval of the British debt settlement agreement was voted late today by the house 291 to 44.

One republican, McCormick, of Montana, and 43 democrats opposed the settlement, while 227 republicans, 63 democrats and the one socialist member, Meyer London, of New York, voted for it.

Democrats opposing the settlement were Abernethy and Hammer, North Carolina; Almon, Bowling and Stagg, Alabama; Blanton, Box, Garrett, Hudspeth, Jones, Mansfield and Sanders, Texas; Brand and Lankford, Georgia; Carey, Cullen, Meade and upward, New York; Collier, Collins, Lowery, Johnson, Quinn and Rankin, Mississippi; Oldfield, Parks, Taylor, Tiltman and Wingo, Arkansas; Domini, Logan and McKewin, South Carolina; Farrel, O'Connor and Sandlin, Louisiana; Johnson, Rouse and Thomas, Kentucky; Rainey and Sullivan, Illinois; Raker, California; Gallivan, Massachusetts; and Smithwick, Florida.

Paves Way for Other Debts.

The house vote was on an amendment to the existing funding statute which not only would specifically approve the agreement reached with the British government, but also would authorize the American debt commission to make settlements "similar, but not more favorable, in terms," with the other debtor nations. The amendment will be formally transmitted to the senate tomorrow and immediate consideration by the finance committee is planned. The time of senate action, however, still is problematical.

There was no effort in the house to attach a soldiers' bonus rider to the legislation and attempts to amend it otherwise failed. Representative Hudspeth, democrat, Texas, sought to change the interest rates to be paid by Great Britain from 3 per cent for the first ten years and 3-1/2 thereafter to a flat 4-1/4 per cent, but his amendment was rejected without a roll call.

Similar disposition was made of an amendment by Representative Rowanbloom, republican, West Virginia, which would have provided that any claims allowed to the British govern-

Rogers' Milk Service

Do You Know That When You Buy Milk at Rogers' You Get the Richest and Best Milk on Atlanta's Market?

About a year ago, somewhat as an experiment, we decided to handle fresh milk in a few of our stores. We arranged with a good dairyman near Atlanta to take his entire output. It was only 40 or 50 gallons daily. This milk, fresh and high in butter fat, was placed in quart and pint bottles in about a half dozen of our stores. We paid the dairyman more than the average price paid to producers at that time, and we sold it to consumers at considerably less than the then prevailing retail price. Immediately our milk business began to grow—and grow fast.

Today we sell milk in 96 of our 103 stores in Atlanta, taking practically the entire output of 14 dairies. These dairies have all been selected by us because of their modern equipment and the splendid condition of their herds of more than 200 cows. And in order to get this good high-class milk we are paying these dairymen an average of about 10c per gallon more for milk than the average market price.

From these dairies we sell each week about 3,000 gallons of sweet milk and 1,000 gallons of butter milk. It comes into our stores bottled fresh from the dairies. Every quart—every pint—carries its own sweet cream—its own rich butter fat. There is no skimming—no robbing milk of its cream and richness—bringing it down to where it barely measures up to the city requirements of 3.6 per cent butter fat—as is done with considerable other milk—so that increased profits can be made from the sweet cream.

And while the city requires 3.6 per cent butter fat, the milk we sell averaged, according to the city inspectors, 4.1-2 per cent of butter fat for the month of January. You can see by this the richness of the milk you are getting when you buy milk at Rogers'.

Bread made from—
has a fine, rich, appetizing flavor. It is a strong flour and absorbs lots of water. That's economy. Besides, the extra amount of water absorbed in the mixing keeps the bread moist and fresh, and insures the use of the entire loaf.

The flour never varies a particle in quality. Each sack is just like every other sack—always. You can depend on it. PILLSBURY'S BEST is built for all-around home use—it's fine for cake and pastry, as well as bread.

EXCAVATION WORK IN ANCIENT MAYA CITIES PLANNED

New York, February 9.—North America's first civilization, flourishing 2,000 to 6,000 years ago, will be traced in excavations of ancient Maya cities in Yucatan, Mexico, by twenty representatives of the Archaeological Institute, who sailed for Progreso on the steamship Mexico yesterday.

J. F. Barry, executive committee-man for the institute, and Dr. Sylvanus G. Morley, archaeologist, head the party, which will proceed immediately to the site of recent excavations less than 100 miles from Progreso. Mr. Barry said inscriptions found on excavated walls and monuments represent the phonetic language of the civilization in advance of the Egyptian age of sign language hieroglyphics. He said he thought the Mexican discoveries would prove of greater historic value than those found in King Tutankhamen's tomb.

POLICE INVESTIGATE GROVETOWN BEATING

Augusta, Ga., February 9.—Local police were today investigating a story related by Silas Evans, Columbus county negro, who told of being carried from his home near Grovetown Wednesday night by twelve white men and badly beaten. The negro, who is in the hospital in a serious condition, said one of the white men in the party posed as sheriff of the county. He said he recognized two of the men. The negro was found on the streets here yesterday.

JOE BECKETT MATCHED TO BATTLE DEMPSEY

Southampton, February 9.—(By the Associated Press.)—Joe Beckett, the English heavyweight champion, has signed articles to meet the world champion, Jack Dempsey, in New York next July or August, he announced today. He understands that Dempsey's signature also has been secured.

"I am to get a good sum for my end of the purse," Beckett added. "The only condition made, as far as I am concerned, is that I must beat Dick Smith on February 19, and if

TWO MEN JAILED
IN KIDNAPING CASE
RELEASED ON BOND

Otis Wood and John Wood, arrested in connection with the holdup and abduction Wednesday night of three men in Forsyth county—one of whom was an officer—Friday returned to Atlanta at liberty under bond signed by a Forsyth county citizen. Further developments will likely take place following the arraignment of Roy Wingo at Cumming Saturday under charges of violating the prohibition laws. Wingo, according to the officers, was piloting the train of liquor cars.

Records Indicate
Atlanta Is Due
For Dry March

Forecasters of weather, however, are not so sure. Mr. von Herrmann bases his prediction of below normal precipitation for March on the fact that three excessively wet Marches have come during the years from 1917 through last year. These were 1917, 1920 and 1922, and the average length of time between excessively high precipitation records for March is from four to five years. Mr. von Herrmann stated, "In view of the fact that we had heavy precipitation last March," said Mr. von Herrmann, "it would seem that we are very unlikely to have any heavy rains this year during the month of March. This means that March will be relatively pleasant, as is generally the case where precipitation is light for the month."

A general summary of weather conditions for January, compiled by Mr. von Herrmann Friday, shows that the unusually mild weather of the winter continued through January, the monthly mean temperature for the state being 51.3 degrees, which record has been exceeded only four times during the past 32 years, in 1897, 1913, 1916, 1917. During January there were four periods of from five to six days duration with daily mean temperatures greatly exceeding the normal. The rainfall was practically normal for the month, and the only really disagreeable weather experienced during the month was on the 23d and 24th, when sleet fell in the northern part of the state.

CALL CONFERENCE TO DISCUSS FIGHT ON BOOZE RUNNERS

A conference of federal, city and county authorities will be held as soon as possible for the purpose of determining some plan for curbing liquor running into Atlanta, it was announced Friday by Fred D. Dismuke, federal prohibition director.

GOVERNOR HARDWICK BACK FROM SAVANNAH

After being royally entertained during his visit to Savannah, to welcome the returning American soldiers from the Rhine, Governor Hardwick arrived back in Atlanta early Friday morning.

He was reported as suffering from a severe cold contracted on his trip and transacted what business was imperative at his apartment in the Georgian Terrace.

Following a field investigation of the situation which disclosed that some method would have to be adopted whereby the comparatively small force of federal officers could be reinforced in their work of handling the liquor traffic, Mr. Dismuke announced that he had a plan for solving the problem, but would not divulge it until after the conference with city and county authorities, and probably not after this conference, due to the fact that liquor runners might thus be warned of the plans being made for their defeat.

Lectures on "Truth."
Mrs. Rose M. Ashby will lecture Saturday afternoon at the Carnegie library assembly room on "Practical Studies in Truth." The program will begin at 3:30 o'clock.

Atlanta, Ga.

Osborn Campbell, 14, came all the way from Atlanta, Ga., to have New York police search for his mother. Fingering his cap nervously before a police lieutenant, he told how his parents separated after a quarrel two years ago and that he later received a letter from his mother postmarked New York.

With this clue he set out. He walked from Atlanta to Greenville, N. C., where Mayor E. B. Moritz bought a ticket to New York for him, the boy said.

Richard Osborn Campbell's name is not listed in either Atlanta telephone or city directories.

Geiger Is Appointed.

Savannah, Ga., February 9.—Homer Geiger, of Savannah, has been appointed by J. J. Brown supervisor of fertilizer inspections in the first and tenth congressional districts. He has appointed new inspectors for each of the counties in the district. Geiger succeeds Louis Garfunkel.

Creek Indian Hits Open Trail

As Wife Leaves

Aboriginal Instincts Seize

Rich "Brave" When Divorce Granted White Spouse.

Muskogee, Okla., February 9.—After three hectic years of wedded life that required him to live up to his position as the world's richest Indian, Jackson Barnett is alone again and with a grunt of relief has cast aside starched linen and beds and is enjoying himself in aboriginal fashion, although among the splendours of his ultra-modern bungalow near here.

Barnett's white wife, who recently was deeded more than half a million dollars, has gone to California with her daughter, Miss Maxine Lowe, leaving her seamy bronze faced husband to his own devices. And Jackson is enjoying his liberty.

The old Indian now has no worries, his fortune has been disposed of and he is assured of a life income of $50,000.

Of the $550,000 deeded by Barnett to his wife, $200,000 has been placed in trust for him, on which he will receive the income during his life.

Modern Loveliar. Barnett's wedded life began three years ago when he eloped from Henrietta, and was married in Coffeyville, Kans.

Before the glowing fireplace in the living room of his bungalow Barnett now makes a rude pallet of quilts on the floor and gets a comfortable night's rest.

Last night the Indian gave the first interview since his marriage at which his wife was not present. Asked how long his wife would be gone, he replied:

"She say she be gone 'bout two weeks."

"She want me to move to California ever since we got there that time last summer. I don't like it out there, though. The climate don't agree with me. Too far from home. If I tell her, 'pose I get sick out there? But she, all time wants to go."

"So last Tuesday she catch train an' go. She say she wanted to put her daughter in school. But I try to get her to go school somewhere around here."

"Then we go off to Washington. I catch cold up there."

Is Not Worried. Barnett apparently is untroubled by his wife going. All that he wants is to be left alone. He said he never been deeded anything, which he never been deeded anything, which he never been deeded anything.

Before oil was found in Barnett's land allotment, he operated a ferry on the Arkansas river. Barnett is a Creek Indian, and in the eyes of the government an incompetent.

SOLONS DISCUSS BURNING SOLDIER BONUS MEASURE

Washington, February 9.—The soldiers' bonus question bobbed up again today in the senate when the military affairs committee devoted two hours to discussion in executive session of the Burnson bonus bill after which decision was reached to hold another meeting tomorrow.

Members of the finance committee, which heretofore has handled bonus legislation, expressed surprise when told the military committee was considering the subject, and some added that the military committee members might discuss the measure but "that is as far as it will get."

Senator Burnson, Republican, New Mexico, author of the measure, said he was hopeful of getting a vote at tomorrow's meeting of the military committee on his bill which provided a flat bonus payment of $20 for each month spent in service by world war veterans and for the return by the government to the veterans of all insurance and allotments deducted from their pay while in the service. The bill was referred to the military committee at the request of Senator Burnson when he introduced it several weeks ago.

Anti-Klan Magazine Suspends Publication When Strife Occurs

Chicago, February 9.—Publication of Tolerance, a magazine opposed to the Ku Klux Klan, will be suspending pending final disposition of factional differences between its publishers, it was reported today.

Libel suits for damages aggregating $150,000 are pending against the magazine, one of them filed by William Wrigley, Jr., who charged he was designated as a member of the Klan by an article made public by Tolerance.

Columbus Kiwanians. Columbus, Ga., February 9.—Columbus Kiwanis club will be represented at the good roads meeting to be held in Atlanta Monday. It was announced today. Joe Couch and W. C. Wisdom will be those in attendance representing the club.

Automobile tourist travel across the United States is heaviest over the central routes, namely, the Lincoln highway, the National Old Trails road and the Yellowstone trail.

nance adopted in council last Monday to the ranks as patrolman, was granted a 12 days' vacation by Chief Beavers, and therefore did not enter upon his new duties as a member of the traffic squad. The committee passed motion the Councilman Fred C. Woodall to instruct the chief to assign Poole to traffic duty at Broad and Marietta streets in the signal tower.

Patrolman Poole stated to friends that he would accept the assignment to the uniform rank and report for duty at the end of his vacation February 20.

Provisions of Ordinance. City Attorney James L. Mayson furnished The Constitution a copy of the ordinance adopted by council June 2, 1918, providing that heads of municipal departments shall have the right to recommend either officers or workmen to the committee above them for places in their respective departments. The ordinance further provides that the committee can accept or reject such nominations.

The ordinance reads as follows: "The heads of the several departments of the city of Atlanta shall be not only the nominal but the actual executive heads of their respective departments and hereafter when assistants or men in such departments are to be added, either as officers or workmen, the head of such department shall recommend parties suitable therefor to the committee, and the committee shall be empowered to accept or reject such nominations and their decision shall be final, if the nominations first presented are rejected, it shall be the further duty and privilege of the head of said department to continue to make such nominations until such names are submitted as said committee may accept."

DEBT MEASURE PASSES HOUSE BY BIG MAJORITY

ment against the United States growing out of the war should be credited against the British debt instead of being paid in cash. It was contended that such an amendment would throw the whole matter of the debt into renewed negotiation.

Amid much jest and laughter, the house voted down a motion by Representative O'Connor, democrat, Texas, to recommend the legislation with instructions to the ways and means committee to take up the measure should not become effective until the Hay-Pauncefote treaty dealing with the Panama canal should be altered.

Chairman Fordney, of the committee, who had charge of the bill for the majority, then called for the final vote, asking for a roll call to show the world, as he expressed it, "that the American congress is practically a unit behind the debt commission in this settlement."

Debate Four Hours. Four hours of general debate preceded passage of the amendment, and toward the last many of the members became impatient as attempts were made to amend and resubmit there was a general hubbub in the chamber, with repeated cries of "vote, vote, vote," and the speaker was obliged to explain amendments proposed.

Representative Burton, republican, Ohio, a member of the American committee, and Representative Fordney, democrat, Texas, the democratic leader, took the lead in supporting the British settlement, while representatives Collier, of Mississippi, and Caldwell, of Arkansas, denouncing the measure and means committee, led the fight for the opposition.

Representative Garrett brought the members, republicans and democrats alike, to their feet with cheers, when, after attacking the republican party for its stand on the league of nations, he announced that he would support the settlement "because of the bigness of the subject and the bigness of the issue."

Body Called Partisan. In treating the settlement, democratic opponents declared the house was without sufficient information regarding the negotiations to determine whether the terms agreed upon were the best that might have been obtained. He also attacked President Harding for naming what they said was a partisan commission to deal with what they termed a purely economic question.

Many proponents of congressional approval argued that the terms not only were the best that could be obtained, but were even more liberal than congress and the American people had expected would be agreed upon.

Replying to opposition arguments that the interest rates in the agreement were lower than that paid by the government on the money borrowed and loaned to Great Britain, proponents predicted that the American treasury soon would be able to borrow funds at equally as low rates.

The "high spot" in the arguments of proponents, however, was that the settlement would prove a long step toward the stabilization of the world and the establishment of general peace.

featured by simple and most constructive co-operation by the active forces of both the state department of agriculture and the state college of agriculture. Commissioner Brown and President Soule not only were on the platform and on the active speaking program, but their subordinates and co-workers were in evidence everywhere working in helpful co-operation and co-ordination in getting the cotton, pecan, syrup and peanut producing interests of this state all systematically organized in their respective marketing channels.

It was a remarkable assembly conducted on schedule basis enthusiastically entered into by the producers, and on the whole prophetic of a new era in Georgia agricultural conditions.

Tonight it is estimated that fully 60 counties were represented in the attendance, the delegations being representative of the best and most progressive farming interests of their respective counties.

Two Star Features. The two star features on the speaking program were addresses first by Aaron Sapiro, the noted California expert, on co-operative marketing, and E. M. De Pencier, president of the Virginia-Carolina Peanut Growers' association, who also is a Californian and until recently prominently identified with one of the larger co-operative fruit growing associations of that state.

Mr. Sapiro, who is the originator of the California plan, a plain man with a simple but important and effective message, is not an orator in the sense of political sturgeon but he is wonderfully impressive in telling a story that he knows so well and in which he believes with all the conviction of heart and soul.

He spoke for nearly two hours and held his audience with great force and appeal as he told the simple story of the prosperity and happiness that have come to the producers of California as a result of this.

"California has become first in rural schools, first in rural churches, first in good roads, first in per capita of rural wealth and first in many other things in the last 12 or 15 years through the agency of her co-operative organizations," he declared.

"Nowhere in California, except among the Jews, do you see women and children working the fields, and on every hand you see farm homes lighted with electricity, equipped with a water and all modern conveniences, with boys receiving university education and returning to help carry on the wealth producing work of the farm."

Easier for Georgia. "What California has done Georgia can do, and more easily through the organization of co-operatives. This state has the advantage of non-perishable crops to market and the experience and mistakes of the California organizations to profit by."

In order that the Georgia farmers might know how successful similar organizations have been Mr. Sapiro took much of his time telling of California farmers' experiences and the methods they used in organization.

It was necessary for them to learn three things, he said, that Georgia farmers must learn in perfecting an organization: first, the aim of such an organization; second, how to build the machinery for it; third, how to get the type of men needed to put it across. Knowledge of all three is absolutely necessary, he insisted, to the successful operation of a co-operative association. The principal aim of a "co-operative," as he referred to such organization, is to stop dumping and substitute for it merchandising.

Explaining the term "merchandising," Mr. Sapiro took the experiences of the peanut growers during the last season, when peanuts that are now selling for $130 and more a ton, with most of them out of the farmers' hands, opened up at $60 a ton.

"There was a short crop together with a short cottonseed crop, which made for a shortage in vegetable oils. An import duty had been placed on Oriental peanuts and every condition was propitious for an advance in the price of peanuts and peanut products, but growers proceeded to force the price downward by dumping the crop on the market in a few short weeks and making peanuts compete with peanuts, instead of having buyers compete with buyers. Supply and Demand.

"A co-operative organization would have known the conditions of supply and demand that affect prices and would have marketed the crop gradually, with the result that all of the growers would have received the average price of the season for their peanuts instead of more than half of the crop being sold at the lowest price of the whole marketing period."

"Several methods of avoiding dumping have been worked out by California associations and can be applied in Georgia," Mr. Sapiro told his audience. "First, by standardized brands, graded products, and a guarantee back of them."

He told how California poultrymen had been able to ship eggs to New York and get better prices for them than the poultry men of Long Island a period of confining it to a few months, and by grading and guaranteeing the product.

"Second, by proper packing." He told of the different experiments made by the prune growers with different sized packages and of the money they lost before finally discovering that an attractive two-pound package served best.

"Third, by extension of markets as to time, place and intensified use." He told of the work of the new Georgia Cotton Growers' Co-operative association and its extension of the cotton selling period over the entire year, instead of confining it to a few months, and how the contract signer would receive $25 to $30 a bale more on the average than those who did not sign, but who tried to break the market by dumping cotton last fall.

Extension as to place makes a demand for a product away from home, he said, pointing out California associations that now are selling fruits all over the world that once sold them only in California's local markets.

Intensified use of a product can be stimulated, he insisted, by advertising and by campaigns of demonstration, mentioning the introduction of a year-around product instead of a luxury once sold only around Thanksgiving and Christmas. The California Raisin association sold 400,000,000 of these packages the first year they were put out, he said.

"Co-operatives should be organized by commodities and not by localities," he insisted, "and organized with legally binding contracts extending over a period of years. One-year contracts are worthless and local organizations that do not control a commodity amount to concerted dumping, which is really worse than individual dumping."

"No one but actual growers should be allowed to join a co-operative association. An association should not have capital stock and should not make a profit of its operations and should not be speculative in its character. All sections of the producing area should be represented on the board of directors, and state organizations should be represented and empowered to co-operate with national organizations for greater influence on the market."

The address of Mr. De Pencier consisted entirely of telling of the possibilities in standardizing and creating great consuming demands for peanuts and peanut products based upon highly advertised and specialized merchandising campaigns.

Afternoon Session. During the afternoon session, which practically all of the delegates attended, showing the deep business interest in the work in hand, addresses were made by Commissioner Brown, Dr. Andrew Soule, President J. E. Conwell, of the Georgia Cotton Growers' association, and Mrs. Reed Terrell, of Merriweather county, who spoke as one of deep conviction on co-operative marketing, and with many entertaining features that swept the audience from deep study to hearty laughter.

She elicited much applause and illustrated the forceful and effective work women can do in farm economics. On the whole this was perhaps the largest and most resourceful meeting of farmers held in Georgia in recent years and productive of more constructive results.

"When the stormy winds do blow" So goes the old sea song, and it would be good advice to add

MONROE KIWANIANS ARE GIVEN CHARTER

Presentation Meeting One of Most Enjoyable and Interesting of Year.

Monroe, Ga., February 9.—(Special).—One of the most interesting and enjoyable occasions of the year thus far in Monroe was the charter presentation meeting of the Monroe Kiwanis club which occurred at the Hotel Monroe last night. A. B. Mobley acted as toastmaster of the occasion and the address of welcome was made by Rev. W. S. Robinson, pastor of the First Methodist church.

The charter was presented by P. S. Twitty, of Duluth, lieutenant governor of the Central Kiwanis division, and accepted by E. M. Williams, president of the club, all making happy and appropriate speeches.

Governor-elect Clifford Walker responded to the subject, "Why Kiwanis for Monroe," and delivered an unusually able and impressive address. Professor C. W. Reid spoke pleasingly and entertainingly on "Our Women."

Bright and interesting talks were made by Judge N. L. Hutchins, representing the Lawrenceville Kiwanians, by R. C. Norman for the Washington Kiwanians, J. H. Skelton for Harwell, Walter Hodgson for Athens and Harry McWhorter for Madison.

Good delegations were present from Athens, Madison, Harwell, Lawrenceville and Washington and the affair was one of the most brilliant ever held in Monroe. The Kiwanians were accompanied by their wives and late friends and the large dining room of the new hotel was taxed almost to its fullest capacity. An elegant dinner in several courses was served and delightful music was rendered by a local male quartet and Mr. and Mrs. Mason Williams.

The Monroe Kiwanis club is a live and forward organization and has many plans of interest to Monroe and Walton county for this year.

Buford Legion Post.
Gainesville, Ga., February 9.—(Special).—The local post of the American Legion, together with their drum and bugle corps and Oriental band, will go to Buford Thursday night to organize a legion post. Edgar B. Dunlap, commander, will make a speech on the benefits of the legion work.

WANDA HAWLEY CHARGES CRUELTY IN DIVORCE COURT

Los Angeles, Cal., February 9.—Wanda Hawley, film star, who recently announced she was quitting the screen because the pictures were "too prosaic," filed suit for divorce here yesterday through her attorneys. She charged Allan Burton Hawley, her husband, with cruelty and desertion.

Hawley is said to be in New York at present. Mrs. Hawley is touring Europe.

Belief in Hollywood is that the star's departure from the screen was caused by the impending divorce action.

The Hawleys were married September 6, 1916 and separated October 3, 1922.

NEW AFTERNOON PAPER TO START IN WILMINGTON

Wilmington, N. C., February 9.—Publication of an evening edition of The Wilmington Morning Star to be known as The Wilmington News will begin within a few days. It was announced today in The Morning Star following suspension yesterday of The Wilmington Dispatch, the only afternoon paper here. P. H. Batts is managing director of The Morning Star.

The Dispatch ceased publication as a result of the recent closing of the Commercial National Bank of Wilmington, which held a $45,000 deed of trust on the paper, it was announced. The Dispatch was bought at auction under receivership last spring by a number of men headed by James Cruikshank.

ments contained in the written communications already sent to your committee. Without derogating from the right of the executive, speaking through the secretary of state, to determine the instructions to be given agents in the exercise of the authority of the executive in the conduct of affairs, I have always sought in an appropriate manner to supply your committee the information it desired so far as was compatible with the public interest."

Furnished Much Data.
The letter reviewed at length the documents already submitted to the committee, the instructions sent by the state department to the American observers with the reparations commission, adding that Secretary Hughes already had pointed out to the committee the impracticability of sending copies of all instructions to the committee, "on account of their large number and the varied subjects to which they relate."

"I repeat that there are no oral explanations that I can give in which I can state any more clearly than I have stated in the written communications addressed to your committee," Mr. Hughes continued, "the nature and extent of authority under which the American observers act, or to the instructions given to them, or to the character of the duties they perform, or the manner in which their services are rendered. I cannot add to this information unless there is some specific point on which you desire data which may be found in the records of the department of state, and which, so far as is compatible with the public interest, I am at liberty to transmit."

try and civilization from destruction—and those two forces can be materially aided in their functioning through the American Legion.

"Those two forces are a thoroughly awakened Christian church and the power of the Spirit of Jesus Christ. The American Legion is non-sectarian, non-political; it is a great cross-section of the worthwhile qualities of Americanism, and its possibilities for good—not only of America but for civilization as a whole—are unlimited, provided we preserve its present state of excellence."

Colonel Thompson complimented the work of the veterans' bureau highly, declaring it was the "child of the American Legion," and predicted that when present pending legislation is put through it will work with even greater efficiency.

Reports of membership work at the luncheon were made by "Skip" Conners for Atlanta post No. 1 and Frank P. Howell for Henry Thomas Ross post No. 78. A total of 974 new members was reported for post No. 1 and Mr. Howell reported 215 for Henry Thomas Ross post. This gives Atlanta post a total membership of 1,224 and Ross post 338.

STILL OPERATOR DECLARED GUILTY

She testified that she had been employed by Griffin at a salary of $15 a week as "housekeeper" at the West Peachtree street address, and that she had been given assurance that she would be "cared for" in the event she became involved with the law. Present whereabouts of Griffin, who was jointly indicted with Nedwood, are unknown.

Mrs. Diggs denies any knowledge of the distilling operations at the West Peachtree street house. She said that Nedwood worked the house about 6 o'clock daily and remained throughout the day and that Griffin came two or three times a day.

Nedwood made a sweeping denial of the woman's story, declaring he had not been at her address for two years.

MOVES TO FORCE ACTION BY SENATE

rine act of 1920 had been carried out, specifically section 34 of that act directing the president to abrogate all commercial treaties, which prevented the United States from putting into effect preferential tariffs, there would be no need for a Senate ratification. Senator Jones in reply pointed out that neither President Wilson nor President Harding deemed it advisable to carry out the direction contained in the section and therefore something else had to be done.

"In other words," remarked Senator Pomeroy, "because President Wilson and President Harding failed to act as directed it is now proposed that congress surrender."

Show Bill's Features.

"It is said that this is not given to build ships but that we propose to give ships away and then pay men to run them," said Senator Jones. "Not at all. We can not give our ships away now on the condition that they be operated. We hope to make it worth while to buy our ships at a fair price and then to operate them. Its main purpose is to enable one who purchases ships to operate them and to replace them as they wear out with new ships and to build up-to-date ships so as to give us a permanent, well-balanced fleet."

Senator Jones asserted that American trade was being carried more and more in alien ships while vessels under the American flag remained idle, and added:

"This must be because of inequality of some kind and that is what we seek to overcome in this bill. If we can get our people to using our ships and carrying our cargoes it won't be long until they will hold their own with the world. Ten or fifteen years is not long in the life of the nation, it is not a long time to establish and put in operation a great American marine but we believe it will do it."

Senator Jones at another point in his extended address in which he replied to many of the arguments used against the bill declared "the man who fights this bill fights the battle of British shipping."

"VIRGIN TERRITORY" BECKONS CAMPAIGNERS

don't wait for some progressive hustler to beat you to it. Sit down now and mail in the entry coupon carried in the advertisement in this issue, and then get busy on winning one of the forty handsome prizes.

The game is young; no one has an advantage over you. All it takes is a certain amount of determination. If you really want one of those big, shiny cars, it will be a hard matter to head you off from your goal.

A hint to the wise has been known to be sufficient.

We've given you the hint. The rest is up to you.

Here are some facts in connection with the campaign which will convince you that you are doing a personal injury to yourself by staying out in the cold while hundreds are enjoying the warmth of prosperity's hearth:

List of Awards.
Capital awards, with their respective values, to be given the eight members of the Help-Yourself club who secure the greatest number of votes are as follows:

Packard Twin Six, $4,420.00; Franklin Sedan, $3,150.00; Hudson Coach, $1,985.00; Buick Six, $1,685.00; Jewett Sedan, $1,645.00; Oakland Coupe, $1,500.00; Chandler Six, $1,575.00; Oldsmobile Eight, $1,525.00.

District awards—a car to the leader in each of the eight districts of the south—follows:

Nash Six, $1,400.00; Willys-Knight, $1,380.00; Buick Six, $1,350.00; Essex Coach, $1,205.00; Hupmobile, $1,200.00; Maxwell, $1,150.00; Studebaker, $1,125.00; Chevrolet, $900.00.

Twenty-four cash awards, $4,000.00. Estimated cash commissions, $2,000.00. By addition of five beautiful, high-grade automobiles to the list of awards last week, the major prizes have been more than doubled—the prize list now including 40 handsome and desirable awards.

Competition for these 40 big prizes is shrinking day by day as the club membership is increased by interested candidates and "undesirables." Thus, your chances of winning are mounting two ways each and every day.

You will be securing votes by getting subscriptions to The Atlanta Constitution, "the Standard Southern Newspaper." That in itself is a whole flock of words, for The Constitution is known and read wherever the hand of civilization throws its protecting shadow. You need never be embarrassed in asking your friends to help you increase your votes by subscribing to The Constitution, the recognized peer of southern newspapers.

No more Rheumatism

Suffering has gone from your face, mother!

S. S. S. is the Great Builder of Red Blood-Cells and Rheumatism Must Go! Just Try It!

"Rheumatism? No! No, indeed, it's all gone, every bit of it! It's amazing and I feel a wonderful glow again in the free motion I used to have when my days were younger. I look at my hands and think of the twists and swellings they used to have. I bend way over to the floor. I haven't been able to do that in many years. I can thank S. S. S. for it all! To me it was a rising sun of joy and liberty. Brothers and sisters in misery, do not close your eyes and think that health, free motion and strength are gone from you forever! It is not so. It is here and now for all of you. S. S. S. is waiting to help you. There is a reason why S. S. S. will help you. When you increase the number of your red blood cells, the entire system undergoes a tremendous change. Everything depends on blood strength. Blood which is minute sufficient red-cells leads to a long list of troubles. Rheumatism is one of them. S. S. S. is the great blood-builder, blood-purifier, system strengthener, nerve invigorator. It stops skin eruptions, too, pimples, blackheads, acne, boils, eczema. It builds up run down, tired men and women, beautiful complexion, makes the flesh firm. Start S. S. S. today. It is sold at all drug stores in two sizes. The larger size bottle is the more economical.

Two Out of Three Children in U. S. Have No Religious Education, Church Conference Told.

Chicago, February 9.—(By the Associated Press).—A new epoch in the educational development of the country—that of week-day religious instruction—before the country and must be met, Dr. James V. Thompson, of Chicago, declared at the annual meeting here of the Young Peoples' and the week-day school department of the board of Sunday schools of the Methodist Episcopal church.

In the United States two out of every three boys and girls of school age have no religious education of any kind—Hebrew, Catholic or Protestant," he declared. "No civilization, no government, is safe until its citizens are equipped with sufficient moral and ethical principle to insure respect and support for law and order, social justice and progressive development and acceptance of common moral sanctions. What a nation desires in its life must be taught its children.

"Church and public school leaders alike are awake to the menace to our national life in developing a generation of shrewd minds and skilled bodies without sufficient moral and ethical principles to turn that shrewdness into a social asset and that skill into great helpful constructive channels.

"This is not a question of making American Catholic, Protestant or Hebrew. It is a question of whether American citizenship shall be undergirded with moral and ethical principles. We must recognize that no education is complete without religion.

"The church is now in the process of organizing a church school system that will reach every child. This system will have its Sunday, week-day and vacation school sessions. The movement has passed the experimental stage, except in lesson courses, and this field is being rapidly developed.

"All over this and other lands some of the strongest minds and outstanding leaders in both general and religious education are turning their attention to this new movement for developing a righteous citizenship."

PERMANENT PEACE CAMPAIGN WILL BE LAUNCHED MARCH 4

New York, February 9.—A country-wide movement for permanent peace will be launched March 4 by a special committee of four national organizations representing a large percentage of the churches and religious organizations of the United States, it was announced today.

On that date will be held the first fifty-six of 2,853 projected meetings throughout the country. Behind the movement are the Church Peace union, the World Peace Foundation of Boston, the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America and the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches.

Headquarters will be maintained at the New York offices of the World Alliance.

At each of the first fifty-six meetings plans will be made for similar meetings in ten outlying cities and towns. Plans for meetings in other communities will be made at the secondary conferences.

Officials of the Atlanta Christian church, which is indirectly affiliated with the Federal Council of Churches, stated Friday that the local body had not been informed of the country-wide movement for permanent peace that will be launched March 4.

RICHARD DENTON, SR.,
DIES AT RESIDENCE

Richard Watson Denton, Sr., 66, of 10 Bonaventure avenue, died Friday at the residence.

Mr. Denton was a pioneer citizen of Atlanta. He was born in Madison, Ga., and lived for years in Columbus, Ga., from which place he moved to Atlanta 40 years ago. Before his retirement several years ago he was engaged in the furniture repair business. He was a member of the Druid Hills Baptist church, and the Knights of Pythias.

Funeral services will be held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence. Rev. P. C. McConnell officiating. Burial will be in West View. Harry G. Poole in charge.

TWO DOUBLE FUNERAL SERVICES CONDUCTED

Two double funeral services were held Friday afternoon, when the twin sons of Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Cook, of Decker, were interred in the same grave in West View cemetery, and two little daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ferguson were buried in Marietta cemetery.

The twins, Horace and Bruce, died Thursday evening at a local hospital. They were 10 days old. The Ferguson children, Anna and Anna Belle, died of pneumonia at the Fort McPherson hospital. Anna Jernigan died February 5. She was 24 days old. Her sister, one year old, died Thursday.

QUAKER CITY HAS $250,000 BLAZE

Philadelphia, February 9.—Fire tonight at Second and Filbert streets, which for a time threatened to assume serious proportions, was brought under control after the paper box plant of John Crampton had been destroyed and five other buildings seriously damaged. The total loss was estimated at $250,000. The damaged structures were occupied by John Seigler, underwear; Margot Bros., candy; Charles Callahan, heaters and ranges; Brocht's Drapery company and Henry Miller.

Old Christ church, which stands near the scene of the blaze, was undamaged, the central city fire department made extraordinary efforts by firemen saving the old edifice, which was dedicated in 1897.

Kansas Klans Deny
All Charges Made
In Ouster Petition

Topeka, Kans., February 9.—A sweeping denial was made today by the Ku Klux Klan to the charges in the ouster petition filed in the supreme court by the attorney general in behalf of the state. As a result the state is expected to bring out at the hearing important evidence which, it is claimed, the state has obtained through investigations in the portions of the state where the state claims the Klan organizers were at work.

Toward the end of his term of office ex-Governor H. J. Allen appointed Judge J. A. McDermott of the industrial court to conduct an investigation. Judge McDermott made no formal report on his findings, nor was any report made public as to findings of a Leavenworth, Kas., detective agency, employed by the state to investigate the alleged Klan activities.

Mayor Parker, of Madison, Ga., a prominent real estate operator; Frank Adair, Ben D. Watkins and Ben Massey, of Atlanta, made part talks.

President George E. Brown, Jr., of the Atlanta real estate board, presided.

In addition to the speaking there was a musical and dancing program, in which several well-known theatrical performers, now playing at the local playhouse, took part.

Several dances of an eccentric nature were given, and the entertainment closed with everybody voting it a huge success.

Mrs. Landon Thomas,
Prominent Augustan,
Dies at Home on Hill

Augusta, Ga., February 9.—(Special).—Mrs. Landon A. Thomas, one of the most prominent women of Augusta, died Friday at Cloister, Garth, her beautiful home on the hill.

Mrs. Thomas has not been in the best of health for some time. She suffered a stroke of paralysis Thursday and death resulted today at noon. The funeral will take place Saturday.

Mrs. Thomas is survived by her husband, Landon A. Thomas, president of the John R. King Manufacturing company; one son, Landon A. Thomas, Jr., and three daughters, Mrs. Brutus Cassius Clay, of New York, and Misses Ellen and Anne Thomas. She was a sister of former Congressman William H. Fleming. Other surviving brothers and sisters are Frank B. Fleming, I. Moragne Fleming and Porter Fleming and Mrs. W. S. Bean, of Clinton, South Carolina.

Mrs. Thomas' home is one of the most beautiful in the south. For many years distinguished Americans from all parts of the country have been entertained there, and among its frequent guests have been ex-President William H. Taft and General Leonard Wood.

America Stands Aloof As Europe Burns

The very isolation which was voted our policy by the stupendous majority of seven million in 1920, the policy of detachment from the perils and broils that are distracting Europe, is now being savagely attacked by the critics of the Harding Administration as having no policy at all. "In all the history of American foreign relations, American prestige and influence was never at so low an ebb as it now is," says the Rochester Herald, which believes that if we were to offer advice or warning to France or Germany or any other nation, it would "snap its fingers in derision." "First, because our Administration has no policy toward Europe; and secondly, because in its present relation to the Senate, which it fears, and to the American people, whose sentiments it mistakes, it is incapable of formulating a policy and adhering to it for as long as a fortnight." While there are many other newspapers that express a similar opinion, the Administration has its strong defenders. In playing "only the role of a benevolent bystander," and refusing "to be drawn into the maelstrom," it reflects the best thought of the American people, declares the San Francisco Chronicle and "so long as the general attitude of the European peoples toward each other remains what it now is, the time for American mediation is inopportune."

In THE LITERARY DIGEST this week, the leading news-feature presents the American attitude toward Europe in all its many angles, reflecting public opinion in this country as expressed in the leading newspapers. Other very striking news-articles are:

See "Fun From the Press" at Your Picture Theater

In olden days when the cares of state burdened the king he would summon his jester. A round or two of banter and his good humor was restored. With the passing of time and the transfer of power from palaces to cottages the humble citizen demanded a jester for his entertainment. The cleverest joke-smiths of every realm were engaged by the press for the pleasure of the new majesty. But oftentimes the best of the jesters were removed from the far corners of the court of the public. So The Literary Digest now gathers the keenest of the wit and the cream of humor from all the world and embodies it in one uproarious motion picture, "Fun From the Press." It is the court jester to the American Public. Once a week a new one appears at the best theaters brimming with the latest laughs. Watch for it at your local theater. For your pleasure—"Fun From the Press," produced by The Literary Digest. Distributed by W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Mercer University Winner In Fight to Keep J. Cody; Reconsiders Resignation

Dr. Weaver, President of University, After Returning From Trip to Vanderbilt, Says Coach Cody Will Stick.

Macon, Ga., February 9.—(Special.) J. Cody, athletic director at Mercer university since September, 1920, whose present contract expires June 1, will sign a new five-year contract with Mercer immediately upon the expiration of the present agreement, it was learned today upon President Rufus W. Weaver's return from Nashville.

The Mercer athletic director recently was elected full-time assistant coach to Dan McGugin at Vanderbilt university and was scheduled to take full command of basketball and baseball at the Nashville institution upon his return there.

Since agreeing to return to Vanderbilt, however, pressure has been brought to bear upon Coach Cody by a host of friends throughout the state and by the supporters of Mercer in all the southland.

As a result of these entreaties from his friends, who are co-operating with him in the effort to place Mercer athletics in the lead among southern colleges, and who believe that

Coach Cody's presence at the helm of athletics is necessary to the end, the "big man" has agreed to remain at Mercer.

President Rufus W. Weaver returned this afternoon from Nashville where he had been in conference with Coach McGugin and other Vanderbilt athletic authorities.

The purpose of this conference was to have Coach Cody released from his agreement with Vanderbilt, Mercer's athletic director having agreed to remain here if President Weaver's return from Nashville was successful in his effort toward this end.

Dr. Weaver's friends say that he never had intended anything since he came to Mercer and apparently he has not failed this time.

As a result of the conference with the Vanderbilt officials, it is expected that a formal announcement will be made in a few days of Coach Cody's return.

Immediately thereafter, J. Cody will sign his new contract with Mercer, it was announced by President Weaver.

RIVERSIDE GIVEN TROPHY

Gainesville, Ga., February 9.—(Special.)—A silver loving cup—the third trophy within a year—has just been placed in the trophy room of the Riverside Military Academy.

The largest trophy, which has just arrived, marks the Riverside football team as the champions of the Georgia Inter-scholastic Athletic association for 1922.

The beautiful prize, awarded by the association, was donated to it by the alumni of Princeton university who now live in Georgia.

It shows the names of the winners for the last three years. Gordon Institute at Barnesville won the cup in 1920, Georgia Military College at Milledgeville in 1921 and Riverside Military Academy in 1922.

The cup was forwarded from Milledgeville by the 1921 champions.

Riverside has two other cups of very elaborate design which were awarded last summer by the war department for excellence in military instruction.

The academy is taking more interest in athletics this year perhaps than it ever did before, largely due to the fact that the attendance is the largest in the history of the school.

Contrary to the usual situation in most of the schools of the country, where there is some falling off in attendance after the regular fall session, Riverside has registered many new boys since the first of the year.

Noting the capacity of the college dining room, it was necessary to place tables in some of the lobbies.

Promising Material. Practically all of the promising athletic material which is in evidence the latter part of 1922 is back in the school and there are several new boys who have displayed unusual ability during the first term of training.

Attention just now is being given largely to basketball and the team now in training is looked upon as extraordinarily strong. It will be entered in the state tournament at Macon the latter part of the present month.

As usual this summer, Riverside will have a very strong baseball team. Coach Cunningham, in discussing the outlook today, said that the 1923 team would undoubtedly be stronger than any team that had been gotten together at the school in several years.

"The boys are showing up better in the various athletic activities than I have ever seen them before at this period of the year," said the coach.

"Riverside, though a new school, has material already that will stand up against many of the larger colleges, and I predict some surprises here by the time another season opens."

THEATERS :: MOVIES

Forsyth Theater—All week, Forsyth Play in "East Side, West Side."

Lyric Theater—(North Vaudeville), see advertising for program.

Loew's Grand Theater—(Vaudeville and pictures). See advertising for program.

Howard Theater—All week, Gloria Swanson in "My American Wife" and other screen features.

Keith Vaudeville. (At the Lyric.) Five artists appear in "Harmony-land," one of the big acts of the Lyric theater bill during the last half of this week, and they don't care what sort of harmony they indulge in. They blend their voices perfectly and then they go to practically any combination of musical instruments and always they score a tremendous hit.

It's one of the very best acts seen at the Keith playhouse this year.

Loew's Vaudeville. (At the Grand.) Four shows will be given today and tonight at Loew's Grand theater, the starting hours being at 2, 4, 7 and 9 p. m. An all-star vaudeville show is offered, besides a long program of specially selected motion pictures.

A Horlick and company in "Dancers' Ideal," have a very entertaining number. They offer, with grace and agility, character, classical, Oriental and novelty dances. Edmunds and LaVelle in a double act, "The Bright Side of Life," create lots of laughter with their senegambian nonsense and comedy dancing.

Engagement tonight are "The Ten Forty West," a one-act comedy; Jones and King in "Grooming Algy," and Bicknell, the clay modeler. The feature of the screen program is Betty Compton in "For Those We Love."

DeMolay Quintet Wins. Thursday night on the Kirkwood basketball court the DeMolay team defeated the strong team of Davidson-Paxon-Stokes company by a score of 20 to 20. The game was very fast and interesting. Daney and Dawson were the stars for DeMolay, while White, Johnson and Dantzer were the ringers for D-P-S.

THE GARDNER-DAVIS ORCHESTRA touches the peak of syncopated harmony in "Haunting Blues." The Columbia Record of this fascinating foxtrot is a masterpiece.

"If You Don't Think So, You're Crazy" on the other side is a hitting encore.

If such a subject can happen and the public be kept ignorant of them, it is time that some forum be opened where information can be given and appropriate comment heard. The subject will be continued by the same speaker on Saturday night, February 10, at 8 o'clock, at the Civic hall, at 730 o'clock.

Incidentally, there will be some reference to the Chief of Police matter.

Cubs Report Soon. Chicago, February 9.—Four infielders will accompany the big league club when they leave here for February 17 for the training camp on Catalina Island, Cal., President Veech announced today.

The infielders are Charles Holmberg, Barney Friberg, Harvey Cotter and George Grantham. They will be in charge of the veteran, Bobby Wallace and Coach Oscar Ducey, who will also help Manager Killefer and Scout Jack Doyle, in coaching young pitchers.

PREPS PLAY GAMES TODAY

The final set of prep basketball games will be played this afternoon before the big tournament two weeks hence.

The afternoon card calls for Fulton vs. Marist at 1:30 o'clock; G. M. A. vs. Commercial at 2:30 o'clock; Tech High vs. Boys' High at 3:30 o'clock and DeCATUR and University at 4:30 o'clock.

Tech High will have to meet Boys' High in the second "crowd" game of the season in two successive days and the game will have much to do with the standing of Tech High for the remainder of the season.

A defeat for Tech High will practically give the title to University while a victory for the Smithies will keep them in the race for the title with no more hard games left on the schedule.

G. M. A. and Commercial High will have a tough battle for the fifth place in the league standing. The cadets gave Marist a beating Friday afternoon and are in the midst of a winning streak. Commercial, Boys' High and DeCATUR have been the teams defeated recently by the cadets.

Bulldogs in Form.
The Bulldogs, just back home from an extended trip through both South Carolina and Tennessee, have taken on some few points in regard to basketball and Coach Stegemen has been working hard of late, attempting to put some of the lessons learned into execution.

The mentor of the Athletic club quintet is another great coach on the five-man defense system and tonight will be a battle of the year in long distance shooting.

Here Are 16 Illustrated Reasons Why It Is to Your Advantage to Enter the Help-Yourself Club Now

Look at the sixteen magnificent automobiles illustrated on this page. Every one is the prize product of its manufacturer. They are, in themselves, sixteen conclusive reasons why you should get in a contest that means your winning an automobile of the finest make. You may argue that you may not win a car. Why won't you? Your chance is as good as that of anybody else in the contest if you enter NOW! The Club is young yet, and by starting right NOW you can still win the BIG EXTRA VOTE OFFERS of the first period. That means 100,000 EXTRA VOTES for every $25 in subscriptions you turn in before February 17. The first period of the EXTRA VOTE offer closes on that date. Clip the ENTRY

COUPON in the lower left-hand corner of this page and get in touch with the Help Yourself Club manager at once. Didn't it make you wish you were one of the contestants when you read their standing in Thursday's Constitution? You can get started NOW and, by going after those subscriptions of your friends who are waiting for you, you can not only catch up with the leaders, but get ahead of them! Remember, the contest closes on March 31st, and for such a short period of intensive effort surely you cannot conceive of so liberal reward! Look at the sixteen handsome cars again—read the "Sixteen Reasons in Detail"—obey that urging impulse—be a winner!

Brilliant Ball at the Fort Welcomes the New Officers

A brilliant event of great social importance was the ball given at Fort McPherson Friday evening in honor of the new officers of the Fourth and Fifth regiments of the Georgia National Guard. The new post commander, and their wives, the ball took place in the service club at the entrance to Fort McPherson and followed the reception given from 8 to 9 o'clock. The clubhouse was beautifully adorned with flags and palms and the music was given by the Twenty-second regiment band. Dancing followed the reception and the presence of many guests from the city and the post made this one of the notable affairs of the winter. In the receiving line were General and Mrs. J. D. Shanks, Colonel and Mrs. McManus, Lieutenant Colonel and Mrs. Kimbrough and Colonel and Mrs. Roscoe Hearn. The committee on arrangements included Major Thomas H. Munroe, chairman; Colonel Roscoe Hearn, Major Macklin, Lieutenant Horace Smith and Lieutenant Riess. Mrs. Shanks, who stood at the head of the receiving line, was beautifully gowned in black velvet trimmed with a bodice of black georgette veiling cloth of gold and ornamented with jet.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Davis Honor Wedding Guests

Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Davis gave a beautiful reception at their home on Clifton road, in Druid Hills, Friday evening in honor of Miss Sallie de Saussure and James Parker, of Columbia, S. C., whose wedding will be a social event of wide interest Saturday noon in St. Luke's church. The guests included the relatives of the two families and out-of-town visitors. The lovely home was adorned with smiling gracefully placed and white freesias in silver vases and bowls in all of the rooms. In the dining room the table held

Many Gay Parties Are Given Friday At Woman's Club

Many interesting parties were given Friday at the Atlanta Woman's club at the regular Friday afternoon tea hour. Cut flowers and many potted plants were used in the floral decorations. The largest group was assembled at bridge by Mrs. D. Fred Rogers in honor of Mrs. Howard Motley, of Kansas City, Mo., who is at the Georgian Terrace, and who is now making Atlanta her home, and Mrs. F. B. Davis, who before her recent marriage was Miss Mamie Branch Powers. The prizes were hand-painted plaques gay with spring flowers. Mrs. Rogers' guests were: Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Motley, Mrs. Tom Gardner, Mrs. Earl Cone, Mrs. Earl Scott, Mrs. Ivan Allen, Mrs. Kenneth Perry, Mrs. Clarence Cappellet, Mrs. Becham Goppelle, Mrs. Cosby Swanson, Mrs. George Bland, Mrs. Claude Frederick, Mrs. Hutchinson, Mrs. Frank Burr, Mrs. R. Elder, Mrs. Stanton Therrill, Mrs. Frank Coffey, Miss Nance Williams, Miss Maude Powers and Miss Margaret Horton. Mrs. C. A. Whittle honored her guest, Mrs. Severin, of Athens, Ga. Her guests included Mrs. Bonita Crowe, Mrs. T. J. Northern, Mrs. Le gare Davis and Mrs. J. L. McMillan. Among others who entertained were Mrs. J. D. Evans, Mrs. Roy Z. Chambliss, Mrs. W. A. Perkins, Mrs. R. A. Stohn and Miss Marjorie Webster.

Mrs. Ragan Honors Mrs. Blewett Lee

An informal affair of interest on Friday's calendar was the tea at which Mrs. James Ragan entertained at her home on Sixteenth street, in Ansley Park, in honor of her aunt, Mrs. Blewett Lee, of New York, who is visiting Mrs. Alfred E. Buck. The artistically appointed tea table was overlaid with a lace cloth and held in the center a bowl filled with cut flowers. Mrs. Ragan received her guests wearing a gown of green chiffon elaborately beaded. Mrs. Lee was lovely in a costume of shimmering blue velvet. The guests included a few of Mrs. Ragan's close friends.

A banquet will be given in honor of the delegates to the student council convention.

The marriage of Miss Evelyn Patterson and Charles Gerald Blount takes place at 2 o'clock at the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

Sunday Concert Will Be at Emory

The Emory university concert orchestra will give a special program for Atlanta music lovers in the university chapel from 4 to 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The program will include "Cavalleria Rusticana" (Mascagni), orchestra; violin solo, "Chanson Triste" (Tchaikovsky), Samuel H. Proger; Hungarian dance, No. 2 (Brahms), orchestra; piano solo, "Capriccio Brillante" (Mendelssohn), Alton O'Brien; Minuet in G (Beethoven), orchestra; overture to "Raymond" (Thomas), orchestra. Under the direction of Dr. M. H. Dewey, the orchestra this year consists of 20 pieces. Crowded houses have greeted the organization at its previous Sunday concerts.

Mrs. Ashby Will Speak Sunday

Mrs. Rose M. Ashby will lecture on "Psycho Analysis" by request Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel. Mrs. Ashby gave special research to this subject in New York, Boston and Chicago and her interpretation will be constructive and helpful. Both men and women who are interested are invited to attend.

Frederick Gunster Sings for Fine Arts Club Friday

A brilliant audience greeted Frederick Gunster in his song recital at the Fine Arts club meeting in the Piedmont Driving Club Friday afternoon.

The ballroom was converted into a lovely drawing room at the western end by means of finely decorated, paneled screens and pedestals holding Japanese japonicas in full bloom.

Mr. Gunster delighted his audience not only with his wonderful voice but by a pleasing personality. Among his songs, which were especially delightful, were "Floods of Spring," by Rachmaninoff; "The Song of the Brook," by Cecil Burleigh, and "Mon-tones," by Cornelius.

Appropriate to the gloom outside, Mr. Gunster sang, as an encore, a charming bit, "Rain," which received much applause.

He closed the program by singing delightfully the "Plantation Song," the words of which were written by Frank L. Stanton and the music by Miss Nan Stephens.

Following the recital, tea was served by Miss Mary Shelden, Misses Isabel and Caroline Howard, Miss Margaret Nelson, Miss Eunice Nixon and Miss Pauline Ware from a charming tea table adorned with two big silver bowls filled with jonquils and wreathed with smilax.

Many out-of-town visitors were present.

The next meeting of the Fine Arts club will be held at the Driving club on the morning of March 6 at 11 o'clock. The subject will be "The Garden of Yesterday and That of Today."

Charming views of New England and other old fashioned gardens will be shown with lantern slides. Mrs. Erskine Jarnigan will be dressed as an old-fashioned girl and will read a delightful paper written by Mary Northend, of Salem, Mass.

The ballroom will be converted into a garden of the long-ago with bordered flower beds and a white picket fence.

Valentine Ball At East Lake Club

The East Lake Country club will give their annual St. Valentine dinner and entertainment Wednesday, February 14. An extra-fine dinner will be served at 8 o'clock. Dancing will follow until 1 o'clock.

Many reservations have been made. This will be the first dance of this year at the club. The next dinner-dance and entertainment will be February 22, Washington's birthday.

Mr. and Mrs. Noyes Honor Bridal Party at Supper

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Frederic Noyes entertained the Noyes-Schroeder bridal party at supper Friday evening following the wedding rehearsal. Quantities of spring flowers arranged in banks and vases were used as decorations in the reception rooms. The table in the dining room was overlaid with a lace cloth and a silver basket of hyacinths and narcissi, was daintily arranged as the central decoration.

The lovely bride-elect was gowned in a dinner frock of jade green chiffon with touches of silver.

Mrs. Noyes wore a handsome gown of black chiffon and lace.

Miss Harriett Noyes, the bride-elect's sister, wore a dainty gown of rose chiffon with silver trimmings.

The guests included the bridal party, out-of-town guests and a few close friends.

Patterson-Blount Wedding Takes Place This Afternoon

The marriage of Miss Evelyn Patterson and Charles Gerald Blount will take place today at 2 o'clock at the Immaculate Conception church and will be of cordial interest to a wide circle of friends. There has been no previous announcement made of the engagement of Miss Patterson and Mr. Blount.

The ceremony will be performed by Father Walsh, and the bride-elect will be given in marriage by her mother, Mrs. Lavinia Wynne Patterson.

Fred di Cristina will act as best man. The lovely bride-elect attended Washington seminary and also studied at Lucy Cobb institute in Athens.

She is a charming young woman, is of a brunette type of loveliness, and has a most magnetic personality.

Mr. Blount is prominent in the business and social world of Atlanta, and is a splendid athlete. He is a member of the Atlanta Athletic club, and always takes a prominent part in the swimming and rowing races staged at the Country club.

Mr. Blount is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Michael Blount, and his sisters are Mrs. Daniel Bowie and Mrs. L. C. Fuller. He is a nephew of Miss Katherine Wooten, formerly of Atlanta, now of Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Shanks' Guests Are Honored at Tea

Mrs. Palmer Campbell, of New York, and Mrs. Stephen Chamberlin, who, with Major Chamberlin, has recently returned from Panama, are the guests of Mrs. Chamberlin's parents, General and Mrs. David Shanks, at Fort McPherson.

Mrs. Benjamin Smith was hostess at a large afternoon tea Friday, at which Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Chamberlin were guests of honor.

The reception rooms were effectively decorated by handsome palms, foliage plants, and vari-colored carnations. The tea table was lace-covered and had as a beautiful centerpiece a mound of cuttings. Encircling this were silver candlesticks holding unshaded pink tapers.

Mrs. Smith was handsomely gowned in black chintilly lace combined with chiffon.

Mrs. David Shanks and Miss Margaret Stewart presided at the tea table.

Assisting Mrs. Smith in entertaining were Mrs. Dickey Medis, Mrs. Hays, Mrs. Struble and Miss Virginia Rapp, of Charleston, W. Va.

Mrs. Colcord to Be League Hostess

The Business Woman's League of the West End Baptist church, will meet at 3 o'clock Sunday, February 11, at the home of Mrs. A. R. Colcord, 97 Gordon street. All business women of the church are most cordially invited to attend.

A banquet will be given this evening in honor of the delegates to the Student Council convention, which is meeting in Atlanta this week. Thirty representatives from various southern colleges who are prominent in student activities in the college which they represent are included in the group.

Miss Pearce Gives Bridge-Luncheon.

An interesting event on Friday's social calendar was the bridge-luncheon at which Miss Marie Pearce was hostess at her home on Sycamore street, in Decatur, complimentary to Miss Albert Tague, a recent bride.

The house was beautifully decorated with a profusion of cut flowers and pot plants.

The top score prize was a hand-embroidered linen towel. The consolation was a set of bridge scores.

Following the game luncheon was served at the little table. The beautifully appointed table in the dining room held in the center a cluster of red carnations and white narcissi.

Flourishing this were silver candlesticks holding red tapers.

The guests included Mrs. Tague, Mrs. C. H. Thompson, Mrs. Ed. Terrell, Mrs. Hugh Trotter, Mrs. Cliff Hanson, Mrs. L. E. Hampton, Mrs. Stetson Hampton, Mrs. H.

are John Barnett, Paul Lyman and K. G. Dr. Loveridge Will Speak Wednesday At Woman's Club

"Woman's Attitude Toward Her Government" is the subject on which Dr. Blanche Loveridge, Ph.D., will speak to the citizenship class at the Woman's club Wednesday morning, February 14, at 10:30 o'clock.

Dr. Loveridge is president and founder of the Elizabeth Mather college and a well-known teacher of psychology, having received her degree at the University of Berlin. Miss Loveridge has given years of study to woman's problems and ways to solve them.

Mrs. R. L. Turman, the class leader, will call the roll and requests that every member of the class respond with a patriotic sentiment.

Mrs. R. M. Stripling, chairman of the American citizenship department of club work urges that each member of her committee be present and bring with her at least one guest to hear Dr. Loveridge.

New members are enrolled at each class.

Mrs. Howard Harman Is Bridge Hostess.

A delightful social event of Friday afternoon was the bridge party given by Mrs. Howard Harman at her home, 161 Bonaventure avenue, in honor of Mrs. Hardin Goodman, formerly Miss Sabine Nichols, of Marietta, a recent bride, who has come to Atlanta to make this her home.

The lovely house was decorated with spring flowers and valentine hearts and favors. The prizes were silk stockings and French doilies. The guest of honor was presented with a French apron.

Those who enjoyed the afternoon were Mrs. Robert Scott Baker, Mrs. John Harris, Mrs. Phil McNagoy, Mrs. Stanton Reed, Mrs. James Bowden, Mrs. Allen Snyder, Mrs. Charles Brown, Mrs. Charles de Foor, Misses Glenn Hancock, Sadie Sibley, Sarah Patten, Mary Ellen Law, Irene Malone, Lois Gardner, Marie Shippen and Margaret Shippen, of Marietta, Mrs. Paul Bonebrake, of California, Miss Agnes Bull, of New York, and Mrs. Nathaniel Sage, Mrs. Trimble Johnson, Mrs. Clinton Bagwell, Mrs. Hal Morris, Mrs. Alvin Ingram, of Atlanta, and Miss Frances West, of Athens, who is the guest of Mrs. Harman.

Miss De Saussure Is Honored.

Miss Sallie DeSaussure, a lovely bride-elect of this evening, was honored guest at the luncheon given Friday by Mrs. Champ DeSaussure at her home on Park drive, in Ansley Park.

The table was laid with a lace cover and had for the central decoration a silver basket of jonquils, tied with a yellow tulle bow. Encircling this were silver candlesticks holding unshaded yellow tapers, and alternating with silver compots of bonbons. Covers were placed for the members of the bridal party.

Lovely Bride-Elect of Today

Miss Frances Walker Noyes, whose marriage to Joseph J. Schroeder, of Wilmette, Ill., will be an interesting event of this afternoon, and will take place at 4 o'clock at the residence of the bride-elect's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Noyes, on Ponce de Leon avenue.

Miss Blackburn Is Complimented.

A lovely event of Friday afternoon was the bridge-tee at which Mrs. James Abner Broach entertained at home on Myrtle street, complimentary to Miss Antoinette Blackburn, whose marriage to Ernest Rust will take place next week.

The rooms where the guests were received were decorated by quantities of red carnations and narcissi artistically arranged in silver baskets.

Tea was served following the bridge game.

Mrs. Broach was gowned in black canton crepe.

The guests were Mesdames Robin Adair, Fred Chesler, Samuel Wey, Ray Fisher, James Zachry, N. B. Barwell, Sam Smith, Joe Winslip, Mrs. Lockhart, Tom Adkins, Frank Parham, F. S. After the business session exercises will be held celebrating Georgia Day, and an interesting program will be rendered. Visitors are invited.

All members are urged to be present and to note that the 1923 assessments are due.

Birthday Party For John Clegg.

Mrs. J. F. Clegg entertained Thursday afternoon at her home on Blue Ridge avenue in honor of her little son, John W. Clegg, the occasion celebrating his seventh birthday.

The house was attractive in its decorations of red, carrying out the theme of St. Valentine, red hearts being used in profusion.

Many pleasant games were played and contests enjoyed, for which prizes were given to the young guests.

The centerpiece of the dining table, where refreshments were served, was a large birthday cake of white, decorated with red roses and holding seven tiny red candles burning.

Candlesticks holding burning tapers stood at either end of the table and on the buffet, where the central decoration was a vase full of red carnations. Pretty valentines were given as favors.

Among those present were Margaret Harrison, Laurie Hayes, Martha Bookout, Emily Whitaker, Eleanor Catlock, Dorothy Withers, Marion Baker, Frances Garrison, Virginia Whitehead, Marion Baughn, Ruth Warner, Ray Neal, Robert Backland, Lilian Morgan, Cecelia Thompson, Hill Huffman, Harry Jones, Charles Wilkinson, Lily Jones, Jerome Withers, Jr., Louis Jones, John Kewley, Arthur Mayfield, Frank Eiseker, Mildred Adair, Billy Booth, Crawford Rainwater, Frederick Bagland, Jean House, John Dabney, Jr., Robert Leece, William Gaines, Jr.

Mrs. A. R. Mayfield assisted Mrs. Clegg in entertaining.

Miss Pearce Honors Visitor.

Miss Marie Pearce was a charming hostess at a bridge luncheon Friday morning at her home in Decatur in compliment to Mrs. Albert Tague of Atlanta, a recent bride.

The apartments where the games were played, were decorated with roses and carnations, carrying out the idea of St. Valentine's day. Hand-painted valentines were used for the score cards. The table in the dining room was covered with a lace cloth.

The centerpiece was a silver vase filled with red roses and encircling this were silver candlesticks holding unshaded red tapers. Red heart-shaped mints in compots alternated.

The invited guests were Misses Marguerite Adams, Katie Lovin Sams, Myrtice Stevenson, Harriet Mack, Nell Casler, Leila Hardeman, Mary Will Montgomery, Mrs. Stanton Reed, Mrs. William Alden, Mrs. Clifford Ansley, Mrs. Edwin Barry, Mrs. Murphy Candler, Mrs. Robert Hale, Mrs. Ed. Mrs. J. M. High Entertains Board of Management

Mrs. Joseph M. High, president of the board of management to the woman's auxiliary of the Georgia Children's society, entertained the members of the board on Thursday at her home on West Fifteenth street.

Reports were read by Mrs. John M. Cooper, recording secretary; Mrs. W. F. Dykes, treasurer, and Mrs. W. R. Noel, corresponding secretary.

Following this were the reports of chairmen of various committees. Mrs. H. H. Harris, chairman of wardrobe, gave a splendid report of work done by her committee; Mrs. W. S. Pringle, membership chairman, outlined plans for a mammoth campaign, which were enthusiastically endorsed by the board.

Mrs. Jack Harlan, chairman of hospital, reported generous gifts from the Woman's Overseas club to equip a hospital room, so much needed, at the home. A rising vote of thanks was given Mrs. Harlan and the Overseas club for their splendid generosity. On motion Mrs. W. Lowry Arnold this room will be called the Overseas club room.

The house chairman, Mrs. Stiles Hopkins, gave an excellent report of work done by her committee, as did Mrs. Lucile Robinson, chairman of cutting; Mrs. W. V. McMillan, chairman of pantry; Mrs. Frank Bell, chairman of meeting, and Mrs. A. E. Christopher, chairman of purchasing.

The chairman of education, Mrs. Frances Whiteside, reported that there are 14 school children in the home at present, doing newly at school.

The auditor, Mrs. C. H. Ashford, reported the treasurer's books in perfect order. Mrs. High announced that a request had been made by Robert P. Jones, Jr., president of the home, that five members of the ladies' board be appointed to serve on the auxiliary. It was moved that Mrs. High make the appointment and the following ladies will serve: Mrs. W. F. Dykes, Mrs. Stiles Hopkins, Mrs. W. R. Noel, Mrs. W. V. A. L. Albright and Mrs. W. S. Pringle.

Letters of sympathy will be sent on the record secretary, Mrs. W. R. Noel, who was unable to be present because of illness.

A silver tea will be given in the near future at the home of Mrs. William Candler in Druid Hills.

Quarterly Meeting.

The regular quarterly meeting of the auxiliary will be in March at the Georgian Terrace hotel.

Girl Scouts Consider Camp.

At the Girl Scout's luncheon given Friday at the Y. W. C. A., forty were present, and discussed the proposed plans for the permanent summer camp and playground which has been offered the Girl Scouts.

The tract of land under consideration is located four miles from Stone Mountain and is near Ingleside, covers ten acres, and the gift is contingent on the sale by the Girl Scouts of adjacent property.

The decision has been referred to the executive committee, which is composed of Mrs. Frank Holland, Mrs. Victor Kriegshaber, Mrs. Robert Alston, Mrs. James L. Dickey, Mrs. Lee Ashcraft, Mrs. Wilmer Moore, Mrs. Robert Maddox, Mrs. J. G. Thrower, Miss Connie Chisholm, Mrs. Sigmund Pappenhimer and Mrs. Albert Thornton, Jr. The committee will meet at the Georgian Terrace Tuesday morning.

At the luncheon interesting speeches were made by Miss Laura Smith, Mrs. Victor Kriegshaber, Mrs. Rembert, who offers the property, and Miss Corinne Chisholm.

The Girl Scouts themselves will also be present at the sale.

Mrs. Harrington Will Lecture.

Sunday, February 11, at 3:30 o'clock, Mrs. A. W. Harrington, lecturer of the Atlanta Truth center, will lecture at the gray room (No. 123) of the Piedmont hotel on "Truth vs. Facts."

All seekers of truth or those who desire a better understanding of divine science as applied to present-day problems, are cordially invited.

ETIQUETTE and ENTERTAINING By Mrs Lyda Hoyt

(Copyright, 1923, by North American Newspaper Alliance.)

Once upon a time nearly every girl possessed a "hope chest" and, beginning almost from the time she began to sew, she stored in it daintily embroidered household linens, personal undergarments, and all kinds of hand-made lace and embroidery, and all this as well as to be ready when Prince Charming made his appearance. Although this showed considerable foresight it nevertheless had its drawbacks, for if Prince Charming for some reason did not materialize, the girl was left with the hope chest as a constant reminder of her disappointment.

But this proceeding was abandoned some years ago. These days girls not only wait to think of their trousseau until the man has spoken but also until they have quite decided to get married. Thank goodness the girl of today has other ideas and ideas besides just the one of getting married, fascinating as that idea may also be.

Today the only place where one may still see the hope chest is among the European peasants, the girls in remote villages of our own land, and perhaps the antique shops. I might also point out the fact that the peasant women take years to make their wedding gowns and trousseaux, while we can get ours in as short a time as the occasion allows. Which is not as clever as we think, however, for their things last a lifetime, while ours—as long or as short a time as they are in fashion.

Therefore the trousseau of the modern girl consists only of enough clothes to last a season or, at most, two seasons, with the exception of a few standard things, including the linens.

The choice of a trousseau depends entirely on the circumstances of the bride's parents and what demands her future position as a young matron will make upon her. Naturally, if the bride will live in the country her trousseau should consist of such kinds of clothes as accoutrements as are appropriate and necessary. However, if she is to live in a city where she will be socially active, then she must provide for it accordingly. But in every case there must be at least a small variety of the necessities.

A bride's trousseau is always given to her by her parents or a near relative and should never be given by anyone else.

What Trousseau Should Contain.

As already related, the rapidly changing fashions make it advisable to purchase only such dresses as will be needed for a season. If it happens that the bride should be going to some place where very few clothes are needed and the family feel that they would like to give her more on this great occasion, it seems to me more sensible for them to give her the money equivalent to spend for necessary requirements that might arise in the first year of her married life. I believe that it is a good plan for the bride to save for future expenditure some of the money she would otherwise spend, so that she need not ask her husband for funds too soon after the marriage.

If orange blossoms and veil are to be worn, then a white dress, white shoes and white silk stockings, and white kid gloves are necessary. As a matter of fact, white gloves are usually worn with any costume that the bride may wear, but one should be very careful that they are loose enough so as to permit a quick removal of the left-hand glove when the wedding ring is about to be put on the bride's finger.

Some brides have the third finger of their left glove removed, thus obviating the necessity of removing the glove. I wore a rather medieval style dress with long sleeves and must confess to wearing no gloves at all. I do not happen to like removing the glove at the altar.

Besides the wedding outfit one should have at least one plain cloth dress, a traveling suit, a fur scarf and a good long coat which can be worn over the one or two afternoon dresses. An evening gown or two and an evening wrap would also seem essential and perhaps a couple of light-colored house gowns made of some soft and cozy material to be worn in the afternoon and evening when at home. There should be as many pretty negligees, lounging robes and boudoir slippers as one can afford.

It is really impossible, however, to lay down any rules for trousseau of a bride. It is so much a matter of her own personality, where she may be going on her honeymoon, and what her life after marriage is to be.

Every bride should have at least a dozen of each kind of undergarments and nightgowns; also plenty of shoes, slippers and hat and as many gloves, stockings and handkerchiefs as possible.

The Household Linen.

The linen is an important part of a bride's trousseau, and a girl even in moderate circumstances should have at least a dozen each of sheets and pillow cases, six plain bedspreads and one or two fancy ones. Six dozen towels of different sizes and for various purposes. About six tablecloths and six dozen napkins large and small, and perhaps one or two tablecloths with napkins to match, for use on the occasion of dinner parties. All these should be of as good quality linen as is within the parent's means. To these may be added lace-inserted and embroidered doilies, runners, centerpieces, and many other

A Mad Prank.

Meanwhile, back at the hotel, Lucile who was wandering about, bored almost to the verge of tears. Ever since her mad adventure with Ted Ewing that had led to her leaving Cynthia's home and going to Greenwich Village to live, she had been curiously restless; she seemed to be trying to escape from herself, to avoid all possibility of having time to stop and think.

"I've danced till my brain fizzes," she declared. "And the mere sound of an orchestra tuning up drives me insane. I'm going for a walk, and I don't want anybody to come with me."

She sauntered about the main floor, hoping to get upstairs and see if Cynthia had returned from her drive, then deciding not to. Some bell-boys were shooting craps surreptitiously, and she was tempted to join them if only to see what the gossip about the hotel would say.

"I had to call you—had to hear your voice!" My Stranger was saying in those wonderful tones I loved.

"I'm so glad." I almost whispered it, fearing the others might hear.

"Can I see you ever—again?" he asked.

"Yes—yes! Anytime you want to see me!"

Then tonight at 7 in the park, the farthest right path at the lower entrance," he said. "Is it all right?"

"Yes!" I scarcely breathed the word. It was almost too much to ask my voice to respond to my will, just then.

"Who was that?" Mamma questioned when I re-entered the room. "Wrong number," I said.

"I thought I heard you talking." "You didn't though," I lied.

stand of cementing a confidence, an understanding and a love between us. So I shall be the keeper of my own counsel.

Jonathan is paying in advance for a soul to be delivered upon demand! Mother had borrowed money of him!

I picked up my room extension this morning to call Rita Warren and was startled to hear Jonathan's voice. Naturally I expected to hear him ask for me. But he didn't. He was conversing with mother and I had no part in the thing.

"Certainly—I can let you have almost any amount you need," I heard him say.

And Mamma cooed. "That's so sweet of you. Now I'm going to ask you to come for tea this evening."

"Thank you, I'll be glad to," Jonathan replied and that ended the conversation.

Of course I said nothing to Mamma about it. I felt that I had no right to criticize her means of getting money. Anyhow if she needs it, and evidently the family coffers are about wiped out, I'm glad she's able to get it somehow.

Jonathan came to tea. And I learned that he takes three lumps and as much cream as can be poured in on top of the tea.

While we were nibbling our cakes and drinking our tea the telephone rang. I rushed to answer it! And then nearly fainted when I heard the voice coming over the wire.

"I had to call you—had to hear your voice!" My Stranger was saying in those wonderful tones I loved.

Tomorrow—"I Offer Myself."

She tucked it under the inkwell.

"Still, since I'm leaving tomorrow I wouldn't be on hand to hear them," she reflected. "Well, it's a hard life. And oh, what a stupid place this is."

At the door of the writing room she found there was only one person in it, a man who looked up eagerly as she entered the room. She walked over to a desk ignoring him and sat down.

The man was at her side almost at once.

"There's no pen on that desk," he said helpfully. "I know, because I sat down here a few moments ago. I've brought you one from the desk I've been using. It's a stub, but if you like a pointed pen—"

Lucile thanked him coldly, took the pen, and turned her back. He returned to his own desk, but in a few moments was back again.

"Can you tell me the date?" he asked. "I've forgotten whether this is the thirteenth or the fourteenth, and as I'm writing a check—"

"It's the thirteenth," replied Lucile icily, adding to herself, "And an unlucky day for you, my man, unless my imagination has gone back on me."

"He's a flirt," she told herself. "Waiting for me to begin to write again. He's trying to get acquainted with me. Well, he will, but he may not enjoy it. Let's see."

There must be some way of showing him what a mistake he'd made, she decided. But just what would be the best method to select?

"Hanging wooden pins on the wall?" she told herself, when he had crossed the room twice more and spoken to her on the flimsiest of pretexts. "He ought to be hanged and quartered. Oh, I have it!"

She glanced up, met his eyes, and gave him a shy but very winning smile. Then, hastily drawing a sheet of note-paper to her, she scribbled. "Be at the old sponge market at twelve to-

Getting On at the Office

BY HELEN ORMSBEE

ELSIE'S STROKE OF LUCK.

(By Helen Ormsbee.)

"The lunches are on me today," insisted Elsie Warren, as she and Melissa Johnson seated themselves at a table for two in their favorite tea room.

Melissa looked surprised. "That's awfully nice of you, Elsie. But why? We always come Dutch."

"I know," agreed Elsie. "But I've had the greatest piece of luck and I want to celebrate."

"Luck? That's fine. What's happened? Had your salary raised?"

"No," Elsie confessed, "but it's almost as good." She leaned forward over the table. "What do you think, Melissa? Cousin Julia—she lives in Boston, you know—she's sent me a check for my birthday. That was two days ago and the check was for a little late. But I don't mind. It's for seventy-five dollars."

Elsie beamed. "Isn't it wonderful?"

"It certainly is," answered Melissa. "All right, Elsie. You can treat me to lunch if you're as rich as that, and thank you."

"It's simply great for you," Melissa went on. "Why you needn't worry about those bills that were bothering you. Don't you remember, last week you were telling me about all the things you hadn't paid for?"

Elsie nodded. "Yes, I was a little behind. But this morning at the office I couldn't help thinking of that check. I figured out I'll pay every one of those bills and leave something over."

"Talk about luck!" sighed Melissa. "If I'd spent too much money, nothing ever happens to pull me out of the hole."

The waitress came and Elsie ordered. That ceremony over, she glanced across at Melissa.

"I did a little more thinking at the office," she confided. "I got to planning what things I'd buy with Cousin Julia's money."

"Now, Melissa, who ever heard of using a check that's a present to pay expenses? Just ordinary expenses, I mean. I don't believe Cousin Julia'd like it."

"Besides," Elsie argued further, "I'd have met those bills somehow out of my salary. That is, in time. So it's fair to spend that check for extras."

"What do you call extras?" demanded Melissa.

"Well, of course I haven't thought of all the things yet," Elsie replied. "But there's a winter suit, a dress one. I'd love to have one

And this is just the season when you can get a good bargain. Melissa, after lunch will run up to Morris Brothers with me and help me choose one."

Melissa groaned. "Elsie! If you keep on at that rate, you'll be just as far behind with your money as ever."

"Never mind," returned Elsie blithely. "Didn't you say I'm lucky? If I get into another tangle, something else will come along that'll straighten it out."

BEAUTY CHATS

By Edna K. Forbes

LARD.

"Now what," I can hear a reader ask, "has lard to do with beauty?"

Well, it can have a great deal. Here are a few of its uses:

Your hands chap very badly in cold or wet weather, wash them at night just before going to bed (after you are undressed and quite ready to turn in) using hot water and soap, and lemon juice to bleach stains, if any. Rub in hot water, dry, and at once rub them full of lard. Rub in so much that a thick coating covers the skin. Then draw on a pair of loose, old leather or kid gloves, fasten them and go to bed.

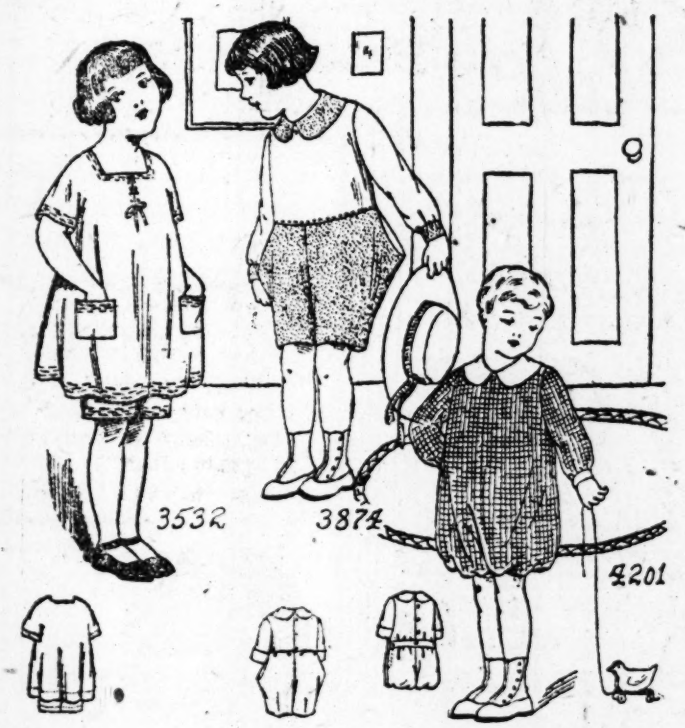

The gloves will absorb some of the grease but a great deal will be held against the skin, so for hours you can sleep peacefully, while your hands will be taking up the most nourishing fat there is. In the morning wash with warm water and soap as usual. You'll be delighted at the improvement. And you can repeat this treatment as many nights as is necessary.

It's excellent also to use as a massage for either hollow shoulders or a neck that is wrinkled and old looking. This is because, being pure grease and fat, it is highly nourishing. But I shouldn't advise it for wrinkles or facial massage if there is any tendency towards superfluous hair. It won't affect the neck or shoulders this way, of course.

Use it for gray and dry elbows, after a hot soap and water scrub at night. It will soften them and make them round and attractive. Use it on the nails if they're dry, and on corns, to soften and cure them.

Especially—you can minimize the perspiration under the arms by keeping the armpits shaved and by powdering liberally with talcum or boracic acid powder. There will be no odor and less perspiration if you do this. Also, wash under the arms with boric acid solution, which you can make by adding a heaping teaspoonful of powdered boric acid to a pint of water. Avoid any preparation that will prevent perspiration under the arms as

THE HOUSEHOLD

Edited by Anne Rittenhouse.

THE VOICE OF YOUR CHILD.

One thing remember—children's voices are naturally pitched higher than those of adults and children naturally speak louder. In your efforts to improve your child's voice do not forget this. The child's voice that is high pitched and the voice that is penetrating is not in itself unmusical or unpleasant. If you begin trying to lower the pitch of a child's voice, trying always to make him speak lower, you may end by ruining the natural quality of that voice. The result may be an unpleasant monotone, a voice that is harsh and unpleasant. To be sure if you live in an apartment house, flat or boarding house you may have to apply the soft pedal to your children's voices very frequently. "Hush, hush, hush," may have to be your refrain during play times. But where you are not so hampered, don't make the mistake of setting the same standards for the tone of your children's voices that you set for yourself.

There are, however, high tones in children's voices that should be corrected, and these are the high tones that come as the result of excitement in play. When there are several children together they raise their voices unpleasantly in an effort to be heard over their playmates. Then there is the whiney voice that sometimes becomes habitual. This is not a natural tone and it is decidedly unpleasant. Most children, whose throats and noses are in good condition have pleasantly pitched voices when they are not speaking under stress of excitement, or when the voices of their parents whom they imitate are not badly modulated. Children naturally have a wider range in their voices than most adults—and their voices have far greater range of expression. They are natural eulogists, expressing every emotion in the gradations of their tones. And this is the thing that you should not discourage under the impression that you are teaching them to modulate their voices. The handiwork of the school room will do enough to narrow the natural range of their voices.

What Women Wear

BY ANNE RITTENHOUSE

Youngsters intend to revel in the printed fabrics which some grown-ups try to escape. Nursery and school frocks are made of silk, chamois and crepe de chine that show bright printed patterns on their surface.

A child can wear a printed frock without excuse or apology. She need not consider the bulging of hips, the economy also. Character is given to the blue, green and pink patterning by green ribbon with a picot edge. There is a slash at neck of frock through which a sizable bow of this ribbon runs and slashes on the hips permit ribbon to form long loops and ends.

The hat that tops this frock is of green straw faced with green silk to match the ribbon. It is a sunshade shape which is strongly featured for youngsters.

The sophistication of grownups' frocks is no longer barred from children. When a new fashion appears on a woman of 30 it is quickly copied for a child of eight years. Girls of ten and twelve wear most of the fashions their older sisters have chosen, but they are interpreted in a juvenile manner to give them coquetry; they do not offend those who insist that children should be children.

No one objects to figured fabrics, a plentiful use of ribbon, huge hand-drawn silk handkerchiefs, or circular skirts for juveniles. If the truth is told most of the elders have copied their fashions from the nursery. Possibly that's why the youngsters feel so superior.

The Mantle of Silence

BY E. J. RATH

Next Week, "Mr. Marx's Secret"
By E. Phillips Oppenheim

A couple of steps took me forward to a place where the underbrush had been uprooted and matted down by something that had evidently struggled in aimless agony. There was blood on the ground, too, and a red trail led back among the trees. With the rifle cocked and ready, I cautiously pushed forward among the branches, following the bloody path which was so clearly marked. At every step Molly begged me to be careful, but she kept close behind me.

Ten yards farther and I came to a halt. Within three steps of me, lying at the foot of a small birch, was a dark bulk, its outlines indistinct in the growing twilight.

For a minute I stood still, the rifle ready, but it did not move. Then I tiptoed forward softly.

It was a bear. He was fat and black, and there was a pool of blood between his front paws. The bear lay in a crouching position, as if watching me. I could feel her shivering with weakness, and picking her up, I carried her out of the woods and back to the camp, where I placed her on her back.

"Do you know what it means?" I cried excitedly.

"It means food! It means strength for you, and traveling—and home!"

"Oh, Ben!"

"As sure as you're here!" I went on exultantly.

We ate bear that night. I made a thick broth for Molly and cooked for myself a chunk of steak that would have dismayed the appetite of a lumberman. The bear was too heavy for me to drag into the open, and where I lay I cut off what meat we needed for immediate use. Perhaps it was tough, but it seemed to me the most delicious food that ever passed my lips.

Molly's courage began to come back to her with the nourishment. She became shyly proud of her exploit, a little ashamed of her fright; and I made a heroine out of her until she blushed with pleasure.

"CHAPTER X.

Two days after Molly shot the bear we started back to the Deep Water. She had convalesced sufficiently to travel, although she was not yet able to take a share in the burdens of the journey. The fresh meat had done wonders for her, and now she was color of strength coming back into her face, my own spirits rose accordingly, and my doubts that we would achieve our goal disappeared.

With more than a hundred miles to go, and with our stock of flour and other foods except meat in a low condition, it was necessary to make the best use of the strength of the journey. The fresh meat had done wonders for her, and now she was color of strength coming back into her face, my own spirits rose accordingly, and my doubts that we would achieve our goal disappeared.

In laying aside my articles, we could do without I came across Jane's bag of gold. It had been one of the dead weights on the severe portage we had left behind us, and now that Molly would be able to help less than ever I could see no use of lugging the thing farther unless she herself wanted it.

"What shall we do about this?" I asked, hefting the sack in one hand. "We can't eat it and it won't keep us warm. A square meal of bear meat is worth more to us now than the entire contents of the sack. I suggest leaving it behind."

"Certainly," she assented, with a nod.

"Some time we can come back for it, Molly. I'll cache it safely," I suggested.

"Leave it, by all means," she urged. "I don't like to see it about, anyway. It's too suggestive, Ben."

Deliberately casting aside $10,000 worth of gold, more or less, only a week's journey from civilization, after having toiled desperately to bring it thus far, seemed strange to me, even then, but that is what Molly and I did. I carried the bag back into the woods a few yards from the shore and hid it in a hollow under a couple of large stones. Then, besides taking careful note of the landmarks, so that I could again identify the spot, I made a little sketch-map of the location.

It was a fine brisk morning that Molly and I set off down the lake, the bow of the canoe pointed southward. She cast a lingering look at our camping place as I pushed off from the landing, and we shared a curious feeling of regret as we turned our backs upon it. Both of us understood what it represented in our lives. During these early days of my association with Molly, after the first amazement at her awakening had passed, she developed a passion for news of what had been going on in the world. She knew nothing of the last five years. She questioned me as a child might. I had never given much thought to the responsibilities of a teacher, but now I had a glimpse of what it means to be entrusted with the task of planting things in the brain of a lazy man like myself. I fear that I would have passed a very bad examination. There were gaps in my own mental record, due to long absences in remote places, which I had never taken the trouble to fill when opportunity offered, and now I regretted it.

I imagine myself talking to a cultured young woman who does not know the name of the president of the United States, or the King of England, or who was unaware of the fact that men were boldly navigating the air, or talking across oceans without wires, or that the North Pole had been discovered, or a hundred other tremendous things that are known to school children.

It soon became evident that what Jane and I had accomplished in a week's journey Molly and I would never achieve in the same time. We won't do at all. Everything's all right! Think! We'll be in the Deep Water tomorrow.

Suddenly she raised her head and looked at me with terror in her dry eyes.

"Suppose you should lose me, Ben?" she exclaimed.

"Lose you, Molly? Never fear that. I'll always be with you."

She hid her face against my shirt for a moment and shuddered violently. I waited for her to go on.

"Suppose," she continued in a muffled voice—"suppose, even though you hold me as you do now—I should become Jane?"

Hand in hand with this slackening of her energies there came, as we neared the Deep Water, a drooping of the high spirits that had kept us gay during so many days of rough travel. She would make efforts to respond to my bantering moods, but our desperate "flirtation" somehow lacked the old spirit. There would be flashes of coquetry in her, and then I would see her looking at me with an expression in her eyes that suggested wistfulness and anxiety.

We were but two days' journey from the goal when I discovered the explanation. Travel was comparatively easy now; there was more water and less land. All morning, however, Molly had been idling her paddle, often lifting it from the water and laying it across the gunwales. Sometimes her head would be bowed, as it she were studying something at her feet in the bottom of the canoe. I knew she was not tired.

"What's the matter, Molly?" I asked. "You are not doing any paddling this morning. Are you tired, dear?"

"Indeed, no. Forgive me, Ben; I didn't mean to shirk."

She resumed her paddle again, but it was for a few minutes only, and her strokes were half-hearted and unskillful. She seemed to have lost the knack she had acquired so readily back in Molly Lake. I said nothing more about the matter until we made a stop for lunch, close to the portage which would carry us into Whitefish Gut, and then I asked her pointblank.

"Tell me what it is, Molly. Something's troubling you."

For a minute she remained silent, looking across the little lake we had just traversed.

"I'm trying to forget the things you taught me," she said almost in a whisper.

"I don't understand," I said blunderingly.

"Because," she added, "it—Oh, Ben! It frightens me to know them!"

"Molly, child! What frightens you?"

She stood with downcast eyes for a few seconds and then turned to me with a swift movement, put her arms around my neck, and clung to me tightly. I could feel her body trembling as if in fear. Gently I tried to soothe her, although still utterly at a loss to account for her strange mood. She was not crying. There was something almost fierce in the manner in which she tightened her arms, bringing my own head down close to hers.

"There, there, dear girl," I said clumsily. "You're nervous. This won't do at all. Everything's all right! Think! We'll be in the Deep Water tomorrow."

Suddenly she raised her head and looked at me with terror in her dry eyes.

"No," I said earnestly, as I looked into her deep, same eyes, so pathetic now. "It will never be."

"I wish that I could have your faith!" she exclaimed, still trembling. She believed I had the faith; I would never let her know that she herself had shaken it.

"And you shall have it, Molly," I answered with forced calmness. "Listen, dear. Back in our camp where you were sick, when you had the fever, you dreamed. You thought that she was coming. You needed me to save you. And I took you in my arms, Molly; not to save you. It was not needed; only to comfort you. And because I loved you—then, But Jane did not come; she could not come; she never can come. She was only a dream. And the dream was only because of your delirium. And when you awoke you were Molly—my Molly. That was the test, dear."

"Do you think so, Ben?"

"I know it. Even before I never had a doubt." I could not tell her with what terror in my own soul I had watched the progress of that vision of her delirium. "No, Molly; there never had been any doubt. But, granting even a little, that banished it forever."

She appeared to be comforted a little, and presently I asked, "Was it this thing in your mind that has kept you from doing the things I taught you to do?"

She nodded.

"But why, Molly?"

"Because I was afraid that—if I did the things Jane did I—that they might help to turn me into Jane."

"Which is foolishness unworthy of you," I answered, stroking her head. "Oh, but you don't know— you never can know—the thoughts I had!" she exclaimed. "Everything I did brought the fear of Jane into my mind."

"Do you think so, Ben?"

heart. When I used the paddle, I would get to wondering if I paddled like Jane. When I helped you with little things about the camp, I would wonder if I did them like Jane. It was always Jane. I seemed to see her before me, and she was so much like me that it frightened me. And then gradually I began to fear that by doing the things Jane did I would become like her. It horrified me. I hated to do them; I did not dare."

"Poor Molly!"

"And that is why I began to stop—to leave off the things you had taught me and told me that Jane had done."

"It was foolish of me to tell you that Jane did any of those things," I said with self-accusation.

"No, Ben; how could you know that? But I have been in terror of going back to the other woman. It has been creeping on me. It seemed as if she were coming back to rob me of all my happiness."

"She can never take me from you, Molly."

"Or me from you?" she whispered anxiously.

"I am trying to believe it," she said. "I am trying to have faith."

We had stopped at noon time for lunch; it was now nearly 2 o'clock. "We must eat and be off, Molly," I said. "or we won't reach the Deep Water tomorrow."

It was with a lighter heart that I watched Molly hasten about the preparation of lunch. She was becoming her old self again.

CHAPTER XI.

"The last camp on the road," I commented that evening as I sat with my back against the overturned canoe, watching a gray and red sunset, coloring not only the sky, but the satin surface of Lady Madeleine lake. We had made the portage that afternoon into Whitefish Gut, a northwestern arm of the lake, and our tents were pitched in a little grove of trees on an island half a dozen miles to the south. We were at last in the Deep Water chain; only Emerald lake lay between us and the mother water itself, not more than a full day's journey for the morrow.

Molly sat beside me, her sweater buttoned close about her, for every evening was cool, now that we were at the threshold of October.

"The last camp," she repeated. "Are you sorry, Ben?"

"If I thought it was to be the last forever," I answered, "I believe I'd stay here."

"You can truly say that, Ben? That it has been happy for you?"

"So happy," I answered, "that it is hard to remember the rest. All the pain of it has been blotted out."

REGULAR RECITAL BY CITY ORGANIST

Station WGM's Usual Sunday Organ Recital Will Be Made Up of "Request" Numbers Only.

Departing from the usual custom of pre-arranged programs for the regular Sunday organ recitals Charles A. Sheldon, Jr., Atlanta's distinguished musician and city organist, announces that he will prepare a special program for Sunday recital, yielding to the requests of listeners for special numbers.

On previous occasions, the announcement that Mr. Sheldon would undertake to answer requests of listeners for special organ numbers was enthusiastically received, and the organist was deluged with requests for special numbers. The same thing happened on this announcement. Already Mr. Sheldon has several which he will comply with at the usual hour—2:30 to 4:30—next Sunday afternoon.

On account of preliminary preparations for the housing of the automobile show in the Auditorium next week, certain repairs are being made in the building which will prevent the usual Sunday audience from hearing Mr. Sheldon's recital first hand. However, the recital will be broadcast by this station through special connections from the city Auditorium to station WGM in The Constitution's building.

WGM "Very QSA."

Feb. 3, 1923.
WGM, Atlanta, Ga., your concert comes often and very QSA on Magnavox.

I have enjoyed all your programs.

New York, February 9.—A further decline during today's early trading in the cotton market was followed by sharp rallies on reiterated reports of a firm spot situation and reassuring advices from the Near East. May contracts closed up from 27.75 to 28.25 and closed at 28.24, with the general market closing steady 12 to 34 points net higher.

The market opened steady, 5 points higher to 2 points lower. Liverpool made a fairly steady showing, and there were bulges of a few points on covering or trade buying. In London, the market was very weak during the middle of the morning, owing to increased nervousness in the Near East. A favorable view of weather conditions in the south and the apparent absence of any general export news. March contracts sold off to 27.50, July to 27.25 and October to 27.50, making net declines of 10 to 24 points, but at this level the market showed signs of a technical position. Contracts became comparatively scarce, which local traders regarded as indicating that the market had been pretty well liquidated, and when early or recent sellers tried to cover, prices advanced sharply.

The buying was stimulated by more favorable late reports from the Near East and reports of firm southern spot markets, and before the advance was checked, March contracts sold up to 27.75, July to 27.25, and October to 27.50, or about 50 to 53 points above the low level of the morning.

There was continued trading around these figures, which caused moderate setbacks, and the close was 18 to 20 points off from the best. While weather conditions were considered favorable, new crop months were relatively steady during the entire day, as though selling was restricted by the cotton market, which was inclined to cover for over the week-end and approaching holiday. Exports today 3,300 bales, making 3,413,440 so far this year. Cotton receipts, 15,525. United States port stocks, 887,682.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON
ADVANCES STRONGLY

New Orleans, La., February 9.—Early declines in cotton today did not last. They were followed by a strong upward movement which was still in effect in the afternoon when prices 23 to 39 points higher than the close yesterday. March, after selling down to 27.75 cents a pound, rose to 28.25, 5 to 12 points above the close of 28.15 with the trading positions at net gains of 19 to 29 points.

The excessively bullish showing of the weekly statistics was the dominating influence of the session. The visible supply of American cotton fell to 2,500,000 bales against 1,900,000 a year ago and much was made of the fact that the visible last year did not fall below three million bales until the nineteenth of March. The figures were fairly large, 22,000 bales against 17,000 this week last. The visible supply this week fell 131,000 bales against a record of 28,500 a year ago of 41,832. Predictions that statistics would be bullish helped turn the early declines into advances while the undertone of the market was strong after the statistics went up.

Around the opening prices were 2 to 10 points down, under poor cables, some rain in the Gulf and unfavorable political dispatches from abroad. Around the middle of the morning the market was at its lowest, at declines of 5 to 12 points below the opening final prices. Claims of a very strong situation in Texas spot markets were a support to prices in the early afternoon, preventing wide declines when rather aggressive selling appeared.

News, Views
And Reviews

The cotton market as a whole continues to reflect the optimistic statements of the Secretary of the Treasury Mellon on general business conditions and Judge Gary on the cotton market, and the latter's statements of railway, news, or professional interest in foreign bidders in bidding up prices as no weakness developed.

DORRIS, DANIEL & CO.

New York, February 9.—With cheap money and trade news improving in all lines the stock market continues to advance. Car loadings are still increasing. Equipment companies are active in raw sugar and metal in demand at rising prices. Copper was taken up in the late trading and scored gains of from 1 to 3 points. Sugar stocks were actually increasing and active demand at close. We are in a bull market, and while profit taking is to be expected the main trend should be steadily upward for some time to come.

New Orleans, February 9.—The bears continued to pound the market this morning, and with Liverpool and the Near East, the market was able to force prices up to 28.24, with the general market closing steady 12 to 34 points net higher.

The market opened steady, 5 points higher to 2 points lower. Liverpool made a fairly steady showing, and there were bulges of a few points on covering or trade buying. In London, the market was very weak during the middle of the morning, owing to increased nervousness in the Near East. A favorable view of weather conditions in the south and the apparent absence of any general export news. Contracts became comparatively scarce, which local traders regarded as indicating that the market had been pretty well liquidated, and when early or recent sellers tried to cover, prices advanced sharply.

The buying was stimulated by more favorable late reports from the Near East and reports of firm southern spot markets, and before the advance was checked, March contracts sold up to 27.75, July to 27.25, and October to 27.50, or about 50 to 53 points above the low level of the morning.

There was continued trading around these figures, which caused moderate setbacks, and the close was 18 to 20 points off from the best. While weather conditions were considered favorable, new crop months were relatively steady during the entire day, as though selling was restricted by the cotton market, which was inclined to cover for over the week-end and approaching holiday. Exports today 3,300 bales, making 3,413,440 so far this year. Cotton receipts, 15,525. United States port stocks, 887,682.
